Technicalities Snag Council on Water Bonds

ISSUE COMES UP FOR VOTE AGAIN TONIGHT

Decide to Resubmit Water Mortgage Bonds After 6-1 Tally Causes Tangle.

DISAGREE ON MAJORITIES

Two Members Absent, Only One Vote Cast Against $75,000 Woodland Project.

City council ran into legal technicalities last night on legislation proposing a $75,000 Woodland water improvement program, after the seven members present had voted 6 to 1 in favor of the issue.

Still undecided if the measure had passed, they decided to adjourn until tonight when the legislation will be again submitted and members who were absent last night are expected to be present.

Says Measure Defeated.

While Council President Karl Troll announced that the ordinance, paving the way for the issuance of $65,000 in mortgage revenue bonds against the waterworks had been defeated because of the lack of a three-quarters majority of council, City Solicitor Marion D. Ward contended that the measure had passed, with a necessary two-thirds vote of all members elected

The legislation presented to council as an emergency measure, was voted on following the suspension of the rules by the necessary three-quarters majority, as all seven members present voted yes.

On the vote for passage of the measure, six members favored the issue while Fred Miller, chairman of council's finance committee, cast the dissenting vote.

Absentees to Attend.

Those favoring the measure were Councilmen C. N. Shultz, Russell D. Porch, George C. Kyle, George Berg, Harry M. Emmons and Arthur L. Croak. The two absent members were Lester D. Hunter, who was confined to his home with illness and James E.

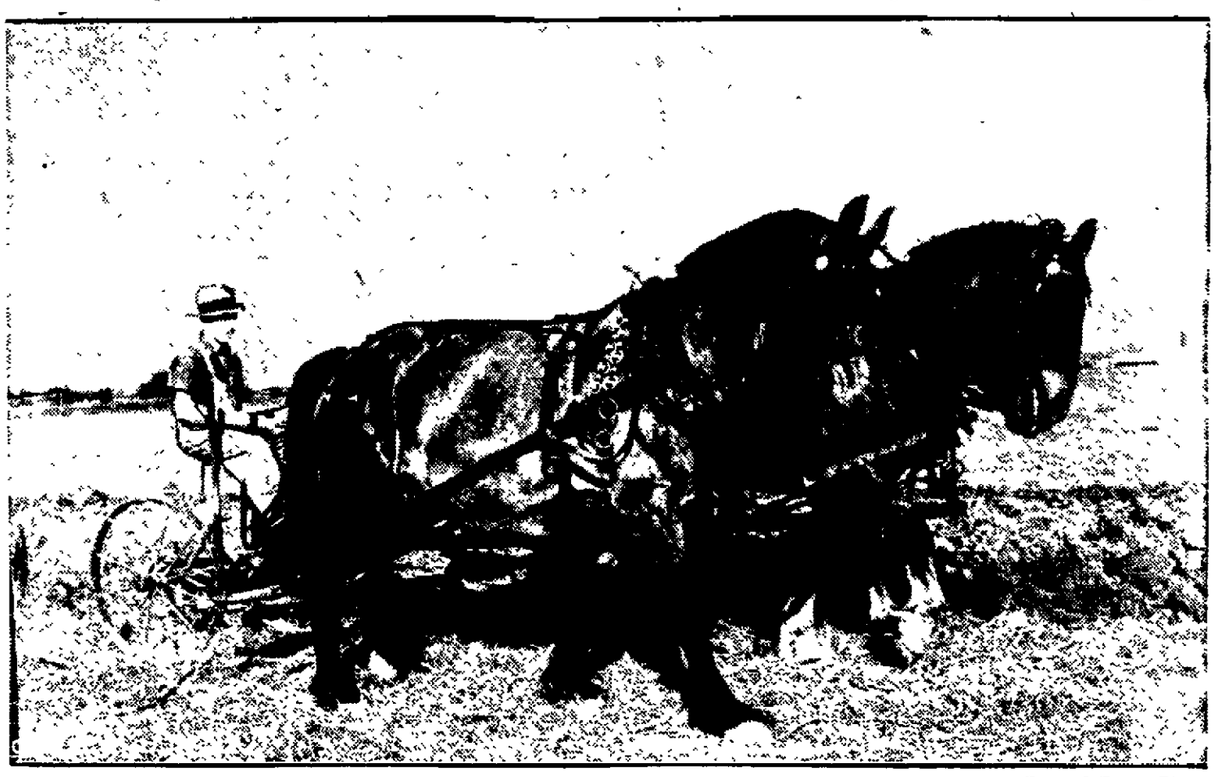
Spring In The Air—Farmers Get Fields Ready For Planting



—Central Press Photo.

When spring is in the air, even the news photographers go around looking for pictures that are in keeping with the season. The picture above was taken near Wooster, and is quite in keeping with spring, isn't it? The balmy weather has proven a boon to farmers, having enabled them to get their fields in shape for planting of crops. On many farms, tractors are used for plowing and cultivating, but Gilbert Nussbaum, above, still sticks to horses. And the team he's using here makes a pretty picture.

SWIFT ACTION ON JOINT TVA QUIZ PLANNED

House to Speed Approval of Senate Resolution Calling For Two-Chamber Probe.

WON'T SERVE, NORRIS SAYS

Nebraskan and Barkley Voice Intentions to Decline Place On Probing Group.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—House leaders today made plans for swift action on the senate-approved resolution authorizing a joint congressional investigation of the Tennessee Valley authority.

Chairman O'Connor of New York, of the house rules committee issued a call for hearings on the measure to start Monday before his committee

Action Due Tuesday.

Majority Leader Rayburn said the house would probably receive the resolution from the committee Tuesday or Wednesday and act on it immediately. Passage by the lower chamber was regarded certain by Majority Whip Boland

When congressional action has been completed, plans called for the resolution to be flown to Warm Springs, Ga., for President Roosevelt's signature. Advocates of the investigation hoped to have the probe under way by week after next.

Although the rules committee was also slated to consider several pending house inquiry resolutions, administration spokesmen indicated the senate-approved measure would be accepted.

They pointed out substitution of a house measure for the senate resolution would necessitate sending the legislation back to the upper branch where the wounds of a compromise effected yesterday t warring factions might be reopened, thus further delaying the probe.

Norris in Protest.

Senator Norris (IR) of Nebraska, over whose protests the senate finally approved the resolution in joint form, said today he would not serve on a joint committee if an appointment were offered him.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley reiterated that he would accept no place on the inquiry committee.

ARMY BLAZES PATH OF DEATH TO CATALONIA

Foreign Intervention Only Hope of Spanish Loyalists, Making Last Stand.

APRIL TO END CIVIL WAR

Observers Predict Fascists Will Crush Opponents in Less Than Month.

SARAGOSSA, Spain — An army on bicycles, but propelled with the deadly force of a steam-roller, today wheeled to the threshold of Catalonia, Spain's proudest and most independent province, and forced the Loyalist troops to the wall

The leftist defenders battled almost resignedly over a 150-mile front in the knowledge that nothing can save their cause except foreign intervention on a large scale.

In Final Stage.

All reports reaching this insurgent front-line city show that the civil war, nearly two years old, is entering its final phase, and victory is practically in the grasp of Generalissimo Francisco Franco.

Capture or Barcelona, Spain's chief commercial metropolis, and the end of the fratricidal conflict are now predicted before the end of April.

Meanwhile today heaviest fighting was reported east of Bujaraloz, on one of the most important highways leading into Catalonia and to the Mediterranean coast.

The Nationalists took the city after a desperate struggle and trained their guns on the new lines to which the loyalists fell back.

The next objective set by Franco was Lerida, headquarters of Gen. Sebastian Pozas, commander-in-chief of the government forces on the Aragon front. It is 43 miles directly east of Bujaraloz.

Satisfied with the speed at which the Nationalists were pushing forward, Franco returned to his field headquarters in Salamanca and presided over a special meeting of his cabinet.

Draw New Plans.

It was believed that several of his strategists were with him and that they would map out new plans for conquering Catalonia. The Nationalists warned the Barcelona government to "surrender or perish" in terrible air raids last week.

WAITS MAYORS' RELIEF PLANS

Davey Delays Consideration Of Special Session Until Cities Offer Program.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—Gov. Martin L. Davey, pessimistic on prospects of the legislature passing a suitable relief program, said today he would withhold definite consideration of calling a special session until municipalities agreed upon a program and possibly until he had ascertained whether it would be acceptable to the general assembly.

Mayors of various Ohio cities, pressing for an early legislative solution to the problem of replenishing rapidly dwindling relief coffers, meanwhile prepared to draw up a program at a meeting of the Ohio League of Municipalities at Cleveland Monday night.

Mayor Harold H. Burton of Cleveland said the governor's statement was in keeping with their St. Patrick's day conference after which Davey announced he might recall the recently adjourned legislature.

"I did not ask the governor to call a special session to consider relief, but asked him to act when the cities decided what they wanted done," said Burton.

Mayor Myron G. Gessaman of Columbus said there was no doubt that the relief program enacted by the last special session, which adjourned officially Feb. 28, was inadequate.

If the state is to furnish more relief funds, some new form of taxation will be necessary, the governor said.

Ex-Inmate Goes to Death After Five-Minute Speech

'Ohio, I Am Product of Your Prisons,' Jones Avers, Then Calmly Sits In Chair and Pays for Killing.

Everett Jones, 33, former inmate of Ohio state reformatory, went to his death in the electric chair at Ohio state penitentiary last night calmly, philosophically, after a five-minute discourse on his ill-spent life and an indictment of Ohio's penal institutions.

"Ohio, I am a product of your prisons," he said in a calm, steady voice, a few minutes before the electric current cut short his life.

Jones was electrocuted for the Independence day murder last year of Robert Lindsey, Jeffersonville, during a holdup. When he was sentenced to death a few months ago, Jones said he was glad that the death penalty was mandatory, and that he would make no appeal, for he "hadn't the courage to live decently" and he would rather die than spend his life in prison.

Sought Reprieve at End.

He held rigidly to this decision until a few days ago when an 18-year-old girl in Springfield inspired him to ask Governor Davey to commute his sentence to life imprisonment. Jones said then that he had not fired the shot that killed Lindsey, but had taken the blame to protect his friend, Walter Barnes, 19, who is serving a life sentence. Barnes told the same story, but the plea was denied.

Jones amazed witnesses and newspapermen last night, when, asked if he had anything to say,

No memberships will be accepted after the drive closes tonight, Mrs. Williams said, except from persons who have been out of town for the winter and who will have the privilege of joining the association on their return. Admission to the concerts are by membership only during the season and no admission tickets are sold.

ORDERS DRIVE ON 'CHISELERS'

Styert Warns City Ready to Prosecute; Says Persons on Relief Can't Have Cars.

A thorough investigation to eliminate persons on relief rolls who have obtained aid by false statements was ordered today by Service-Safety Director Tracy C. Styert.

Aroused by reports that many who are not eligible have obtained relief by misrepresentation of facts, Styert warned all "chiselers" to withdraw immediately or face the responsibility of prosecution.

"There isn't going to be any driving of automobiles by people on relief while the city is footing the relief bills," Styert said emphatically.

He added that all suspected cases of unwarranted relief that has been brought to his attention were being referred to Relief Director Earl A. Nist with orders to make a thorough investigation.

He said he had been told that there were some relief clients now receiving aid, who owned their own property, were working and also driving a car.

"That's more than the city is going to stand for," he said. "No person on the relief rolls is allowed to drive an automobile while accepting aid from the city.'

He explained that plans were being made by Nist through the co-operation of the Richland County Automobile club to have a complete check of all license plates after April 15 to ascertain whether any had been issued to relief clients. All new applications, he said, were being checked with the auto club for licenses.

JAPS TO QUIT ALASKA FISHING

Assures U. S. Vessels Will Keep Out of Salmon Waters In Formal Note.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—A formal note from Japan gave the United States assurances today that Japanese salmon fishing in Alaskan waters would be ended.

American fishermen had complained that the Japanese were depleting the salmon resources, threatening the continued existence of the Alaskan salmon industry which employs 25,000 persons

Japan's note advised that she was suspending her three-year salmon fishing survey begun in 1936, that she would not issue licenses for salmon fishing off Alaska and that she would punish her citizens who fished without licenses.

In a note last Nov. 22 the United States called Japan's attention to the "seriousness of the problem."

Jubilation of the American salmon industry over the Japanese announcement was overshadowed by a wage controversy which already has delayed start of this year's work several weeks

Operators said they might not fish this year unless the Canned Salmon Industry's demand that five unions take a 10 per cent wage cut is met They said large stocks on hand made the cut imperative.

Secretary of Labor Perkins yesterday appointed a mediator.

Slain Girl's Parents Seek To Comfort Boy Who Killed Her

(By United Press)

NEW YORK—Two households, stricken by tragedy, arose as one today to give comfort and advice to 16-year-old Donald F. Carroll, jr., who killed his sweetheart because she requested it.

In one of these households lived pretty Charlotte Matthiesen, 18, whose love for Donald was so great that she begged him to kill her but to spare himself, despite their suicide pact. He did, and today he was in jail awaiting action of the grand jury.

The tragedy resulted from Charlotte's pregnancy, her fear of telling her parents about it, and of Donald's inability to finance a marriage.

"Harming the boy will not bring back my girl," said the father of the golden-haired victim. "The poor boy couldn't have been himself when he did this thing. I do not want to see him punished. I do not want to see him go to the electric chair."

It was Frederick Matthiesen speaking, and he recalled how strict his wife had been with Charlotte, how she had "believed in the old-fashioned way of raising children." Had they known of their daughter's problem, he said, they would have sanctioned marriage.

"Donald was a fine boy," he said. "A few years difference in age makes no difference. Anything was better than this."

Mrs. Matthiesen was too grief-stricken to say more than a few words, but she echoed her husband's views and declared that she had loved Donald "as my own son."

Donald's mother, the wife of a retired army officer, said:

"They were just two babies who didn't know what it was all

Davey, Still Silent On Plans, Opens State Tour Next Week

Although Gov Martin L. Davey's official announcement of his candidacy for a third term is yet to come, he will open a speaking tour of the state next week, with Mansfield the second on his list of visits, dispatches from Columbus said today.

While it was believed the governor might announce his candidacy in a talk in Mansfield High school auditorium Friday night, Columbus political observers predict he will make his plans public in a radio address Monday night or in a talk at Youngstown Tuesday night.

Gov. Davey will speak in Mansfield at a nine-county Democratic rally on the invitation of E. K. Kallmerten, chairman of the Richland County Democratic Executive committee. Democratic leaders from the six counties in the 17th district and three outside the district have been invited to attend the rally which will open the primary campaign in the district.

The governor's selection of Youngstown for his first talk was regarded by observers as a challenge to the CIO labor groups who have threatened to defeat him should he declare for a third term because he sent national guardsmen into the district last summer during the steel strike.

Plans for Gov. Davey's campaign to defeat Charles Sawyer of Cincinnati, for the nomination Aug. 9 were discussed yesterday at the governor's office where Mrs. Myrna Smith, Davey's secretary, met with cabinet members and department heads. The governor was not present, Associated Press dispatches said. It was believed Davey will speak in most of the state's 88 counties before the primary.

A Farmer's Diary

March 25.

MY WIFE thinks I should get the lawn mower sharpened. It's too soon for that. The grass has only begun to grow, and the mower is in fair shape, anyway. What does a woman know about machinery?

Funny how women are. There's my neighbor, M——, now past sixty, who was a bachelor until late in life. His wife is a round, jolly, hard-working, neighborly soul, with a flock of grandchildren by a former marriage. She and M—— are very happy together. She takes excellent care of his house, his meals, and him—and half the time he doesn't even know he is being managed.

The cough syrup and the syrup of figs are in similar bottles. The old man's eyes are none too good, but it is his habit to take something for his cough, from the bottle on the mantel. Occasionally his wife juggles the bottles, according to her own diagnosis of his needs. And if a huge swig of syrup of figs does not stop his cough, at least Mrs. M—— declares "He might not take it if he knew, but it don't hurt him none."

She knows he is very fond of young dandelion greens. I saw her, just recovering from an illness, start across the fields with a basket on her arm; stoop with difficulty to dig the tender plants, return slowly with a quart of juicy, green and white clumps of stems.

"How will you prepare them?" I asked her.

"He likes them wilted, with bacon, and a mite o' vinegar. He'll scold me for goin' after them, but he'll eat them just the same—and they'll do him good. Nothin' better for a person in the spring than dandelion bitters."

They will do him good! She has his best interests at heart. Good wives are like that. . . .

Come to think of it, sharpening that lawn mower would give a man employment for an hour. Maybe I had better put it in my car before I forget it.

WATER BONDS SNAG COUNCIL

Issue Comes Up Again Tonight As Result of Technicality Over Required Vote.

Crum, who was out of the city on business.

Both Crum and Hunter are expected to attend tonight's session while Miller indicated last night that he would be unable to be present.

Before the seven councilmen cast their votes on the issue, they heard from Judge C. H. Huston, president of the Chamber of Commerce, and C. L. Van Derau, chairman of the chamber's water development committee.

Speaking for nearly an hour, Judge Huston and Van Derau called on council to approve the Woodland project and cited various reasons why the water improvements should be made at this time.

The Woodland program was endorsed by the chamber last year and several months ago the organization called on council again to approve this issue.

At the pre-meeting caucus session last night only one councilman expressed opposition to the measure. Miller said he declared himself a year ago as being against "plastering the waterworks with a mortgage and was not in favor of issuing any amount of bonds over $25,000."

Ward explained this morning that while the three-fourths majority was required on the motion for suspension of the rules, only a two-thirds vote was necessary on the approval for passage.

Recommends Resubmission.

He declared that the measure had been approved by council, but recommended that the legislation be submitted again tonight.

The reason for this, he explained was that on the question of a bond issue, the city was required to present a transcript of the legisaltion to the bonding company showing the procedure followed. To make sure that the bonding companies might not question the procedure, Ward said he had recommended that the measure be acted on again.

C. N. Shultz, chairman of council's water committee, who submitted the proposal at last night's session said that a new ordinance was being drafted today for presentation tonight.

The measure he said would be identical to the proposal submitted last night, with one exception—instead of asking for the issuance of $65,000 in mortgage revenue bonds, it will ask for $64,000. This is another technicality, as the bill resubmitted cannot be identical to the one turned down.

Following a pre-meeting caucus session in which Shultz had outlined three different plans for extensions in the water system—a $75,000 Woodland project, a $55,000 Woodland project and an $11,000 water main extension—he asked council to "go along" on the largest of the three projects.

As a work relief program, Shultz said the project would give 150 men work for at least three months.

"Do we want to place these men, who will be out of work here July 1 on the dole, or do we want to give them work," Shultz said. "We as members of council should clear our minds and conscience by at least giving these men three months work."

He pointed out that a year ago he had not been in favor of issuing water revenue bonds but stated that in view of the existing conditions, it was necessary.

Sees No Rate Increase.

"We can issue $65,000 in water revenue bonds and we will not have to raise the water rates," Schultz asserted.

The measure to go before council tonight calls for the issuance of $64,000 in mortgage revenue bonds against city's $1,500,000 water system along with a supplemental appropriation of $10,000 from the waterworks fund. All labor will be furnished by WPA.

The plan which is a part of the city improvements already approved by WPA and designed to bolster the water pressure in Woodland, calls for the construction of a tank tower and booster pumps at the reservoir, under contract at approximately $20,000, and a high capacity main from the reservoir over Cook road to Lexington avenue and down Lexington avenue to Blanche street.

Van Derau contended the $75,000 Woodland project would serve a two-fold purpose.

He pointed out that no action had been taken on the project in the past three months and asserted "it is high time for council to get in and do something about the water problem for the taxpayers in that area."

"Not only would the project serve to give better water pressure in Woodland," Van Derau said, 'but it would also provide work at a time when men need employment.

"It is not just a case of doing something for Woodland. Most of the people in that area have been forced to install pumps to get pressure in their homes, but the job would provide for WPA labor and give men employment in the building trade that has been retarded in that area because of the lack of water pressure."

Judge Joins In Plea.

Judge Huston who followed him explained the chamber was not attempting to dictate to council, but that the organization had done its duty by helping to sell the water needs to the city of Mansfield and that the question of financing now rested solely with council.

"However, you are not only faced with the water problem, but also that of providing relief," the judge said.

"With the change in conditions, it behooves us to meet that change. We must provide work to preserve the self-respect of those persons who are unemployed."

10 GROUPS CALL ON COUNCIL TO OKAY PARK JOB

Committee Studies Plea For Funds For WPA Project That Would Employ 80.

Council's finance committee had before it today a request calling for the release of sufficient funds to proceed with a proposed WPA city parks project that would give 80 WPA workers employment for four months.

The request, in the form of resolutions from 10 civic organizations, was presented to council last night, asking that council approve an appropriation of $6,000 as the city's share on a $25,000 parks improvement project.

A delegation of women representing Mansfield's five garden clubs was present at the meeting and called on council to consider the project that would beautify the city's parks and save them from further deterioration.

Asks Immediate Action.

Mrs. A. J. Reynolds, president of the Mansfield Garden club, told council that immediate action should be taken on the project in order to conserve the parks.

She said the garden clubs wanted to see the Mansfield parks brought back to places of beauty and made recreational centers.

"This is one of our problems," she said, "and we will be glad to meet with any council committee at any time to duscuss the matters."

The resolutions presented by several labor bodies and garden clubs stressed the need of the project to provide work for those on WPA rolls.

The park project which was discussed at the Town Hall meeting last month includes the cleaning up and beautifying all the unsightly spots in the city parks, building of stone walks and ramps, tearing down unsightly buildings and installing equipment to make the parks practical for outdoor recreation centers.

Plans call for approximately $19,000 in federal funds and $6,000 as the city's share.

The project has been approved by the district WPA office and is awaiting an appropriation from city council before it will go to Washington for final approval.

Husband Just Spoiled, Indulged Boy

By VIRGINIA LEE

"DEAR MISS LEE: I am a constant reader of your column and would like to ask you for some advice.

"I am 21, married for two and a half years, and have a baby 19 months old. It has not been a happy marriage for me. My husband doesn't seem to want to settle down. He goes out quite a lot without me and never tells me where he goes. He lies continually. I know he goes out with other girls but he says he doesn't. He asked my best girl friend to go out with him. He has worried me very much.

"He always is embarrassing me in front of my friends. I am now up home with my mother. He continues to come up to see me. I still am in love with him, but I think if I divorced him I would forget him and be happy. Please tell me what to do.

"MRS. L. C."

Cases like yours make the older generation say that the young of today have no sense of responsibility. It is not universally true, I know. Your husband is a spoiled little boy; never should have married so young. He can't settle down to face life as it is and shoulder his responsibilities. I wonder whether he is an only child whose parents have always given him everything he asked for?

What to do? Can't you keep on trying for a little while longer to make a home for your baby and try to get your husband to cooperate? As he is so childish you will have to try child psychology on him. Don't scold or question him as to where he has been, what he has been doing, or anything. Be glad to see him, be jolly — all sweetness and light — and praise him for everything he does that is sweet.

He does like you still, you see, or he wouldn't come to see you. Build on that. Be a good companion to him. If he is cross use the "soft answer" on him. Most women have to be mothers as well as wives to their husbands, and you certainly have an excellent chance to practice that quality.

Of course it may fail, but as you love this irresponsible young man, it is worth trying, isn't it? Try it for your own sake, but most of all for the baby who needs both his own father and mother.

* * *

K. M. S. is only 16, but she is in love—and with a boy of 20 who is going with another girl. He tells her he loves her too, is willing to swear it, and comes to see her at times. Will I please give her some advice on how to get him back, as they once went together, and should she ask him to go to her high school "Friendship dance?"

If he "goes steady" with this other girl, I do not see how you can think he loves you best, K. M. S. If he does, why doesn't he go with you? Seems to me he only says he loves you because you insist upon asking him and he doesn't want to hurt your feelings.

I do not think you should ask him to go to the dance. How would you like it if you were going with someone and some other girl asked your boy friend to go to a dance with her? Tell him the only way he can prove that he cares for you is for him to quit the other girl and go with you again.

When cutting tulip blossoms do not cut the leaves. Tulip bulbs get their nourishment for next year's bloom from the leaves, so leaves should be left on until they turn yellow and wither.

Shop-Wise
IT IS BETTER TO BUY BY THE POUND OR PINT, RATHER THAN BY "BASKET," "PAIL" OR "CAN." THE POUND OR PINT IS A DEFINITE MEASURE. THE "BASKET" OR "PAIL" IS NOT.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

As I handed the keys of our suite to the hotel clerk, with instructions for messages to Miss Whitlock and any other possible callers, there flashed vividly before my mind the old proverb about a nettle firmly grasped not stinging so cruelly, and an evil lessening in force when faced. They had proved themselves, I told myself triumphantly.

True, a wave of humiliation, searing, shaming, swept over me as I handed the man the keys, for although his face and eyes were strictly impersonal, I knew that he not only knew who I was, but was also aware of the bizarre incident of the night before when the drunken woman had called up and demanded to talk to Dicky. But I was able to make my own face, voice and eyes so composed and noncommittal that I was sure he guessed nothing of the turmoil which raged within me as I turned and walked to the door.

Ordeal Won!

The ordeal had been faced, and I had won! I knew that for many days to come I should feel a certain shrinking every time I faced the eyes of the hotel employes. But I knew also that my chagrin would gradually grow less with the knowledge that when some new titbit of scandal engaged their attention, our affairs would be forgotten.

Fortified with this knowledge and my own resolution, I was able to greet Mary nonchalantly as she stood in the doorway watching the tall, good-looking young doorman showing a taxi driver just where he should draw up for us.

"You were successful, I see," I said, again relieved at her quick approving scrutiny of my face.

"You mean he was," Mary said with a nod toward the doorman.

"Poor dear! I thought he'd trip over his own feet, he traveled so fast in search of the taxi. We certainly rate around this joint, or my respected papa-in-law does. Put up your purse. I have the tip. Dear Papa can have this on him, too."

She was murmuring her words for my ear alone, but she abruptly broke off even this muted speech as the doorman turned, came rapidly up the steps and solicitously ushered us down and into the cab.

Start at Park.

"Fifth avenue at the park entrance, don't you think, Auntie Madge?" Mary asked deferentially, and, at my ready assent, repeated the directions to the taxi driver.

"It's a marvelous day for a walk," she commented when we were in motion, looking out on the streets flooded with the late summer sunshine; "air just catching the tang of early autumn. Give me a long credit mark! I didn't compare it to wine!"

"It's already marked down," I told her, laughing. "And I agree with you about the walk. The air's just cool and bracing enough to make a walk most enjoyable."

"I thought, if you didn't mind, we'd just begin at the park and cruise down the avenue. We can do Park and Madison and the side streets some other time, but today dear old Fifth avenue is good enough for us, n'est ce pas?"

Mary Enthusiastic.

"Indeed it is," I told her, smiling, and for the next two hours we had what Mary called a "perfect orgy" of window shopping, sauntering down one side of the avenue to a street we had tacitly named our first southern objective, and from thence up the other side.

I looked, admired, but could not grow enthusiastic over the beautiful things displayed in the windows. But Mary was like a child in her delight and enthusiasm, and fitted herself out in imagination with a dozen or more costumes, including all the accessories.

I noted with approval that though her taste ran to the exotic, it was never crude. In this, she was running true to form. The most exquisite rightness is always hers in costuming. From lipstick to heels she is never extreme.

But even as I registered my silent approval, a psychic sixth sense "made my hackles bristle" with the feeling that something sinister was near, something with eyes that were watching us narrowly.

Mustard and horseradish mixed make an excellent relish for cold meats. Mix the mustard and add to it an equal quantity of grated horseradish, which has been boiled 10 minutes. Thin the mixture with a little of the water in which the horseradish was boiled.

Camphorated oil scattered about in places frequented by ants will soon exterminate them.

THEATER

ALTHOUGH Bing Crosby's current picture "Doctor Rhythm" won't be released until early in June, the radio-screen star plans to start work on his second picture this year on March 26. It is tentatively titled "Sing, You Sinners," and Fred MacMurray has been signed to appear with Bing. . . . Sylvia Sidney again plays a poor little girl of the other side of the tracks in "You and Me." She'll be a department store clerk, with George Raft opposite her as an ex-convict. At the present time they plan to end it happily, but you never can tell about a Sylvia Sidney picture. Due for release late in May.

"Sunnybrook Farm."

"Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," the beloved story by Kate Douglas Wiggin which was read by every school girl a few years ago, has been streamlined as a modern vehicle for the First Lady of the Box Office, Shirley Temple. The famous curls are tied back as Shirley plays a slightly older girl, and she is surrounded by "names," among them Randolph Scott, Gloria Stuart, Bill Robinson (the colored tap dancer who has appeared in a number of her pictures), Slim Summerville, Alan Dinehart, Dixie Dunbar, Phyllis Brooks, Helen Westley and any number of others. Fulfilling a request of thousands of fans, Shirley will sing several of her old songs, which she introduced and which became hits, among them "Good Ship Lollypop" and "Goodnight My Love." As for the Farm—you'll never recognize it when its all rigged up as a radio center for the starlet and her cast. The picture opens with a midnight show tonight at the Ohio.

* * *

"Big Broadcast of 1938."

While stars twinkle all over "The Big Broadcast of 1938," one particular star outshines them all. W. B. Fields, bulbous-nosed comedian and late starring partner of one Charlie McCarthy, makes his first screen appearance since his illness, and previews say that the old razor-like wit is there as keen and flashing as ever. The story isn't particularly important in a picture like this, where the cast is everything. Martha Raye and a lovely newcomer, Dorothy Howe; Dorothy Lamour, Shirley Ross, Ben Blue, Bob Hope, Lynne Overman, Rufe (Rubber Face) Davis, Grave Bradley, Leif Erickson—but the cast goes on and on. Kirsten Flagstad, opera star, makes her debut, and there are seven songs, of which three are seasonal hits. The big Paramount radio-screen festival opens at the Madison Sunday.

* * *

"Outside of Paradise."

Phil Regan, the Brooklyn cop who sang his way into Hollywood studios, and Penny Singleton, are featured in "Outside of Paradise," which the Majestic offers its patrons Sunday and Monday. Regan inherits a castle in Ireland and when he goes to claim it finds that a part owner is an Irish colleen who refuses to give up her half. Regan starts a hamburger stand and brings over his New York band, and in the end there is a happy compromise between the two owners of the castle. "When G-Men Step In" is a title which suggests the plot. It concerns two brothers, one a racket man and the other a G-man, and when the G-men step in, tragedy results for the brothers. Don Terry, Jacquelin Wells and Robert Paige head the cast.

* * *

"Wells Fargo."

Frank Lloyd's epical panorama of the Wells Fargo company and the development of trans-continental transportation is told in "Wells Fargo" which the Ritz has booked for tomorrow and Monday. Some of the characters are figures from history and others are fictitious, but the main line of the story has been done with considerable authenticity. It shows the pony express and the development of the American Railway Express, and the telegraph system across the countrw. The love story of Joel McCrea and Frances Dee run parallel with the action. Bob Burns as a plainsman, Henry O'Neill, Porter Hall, Lloyd Nolan, John Mack Brown and many others are in the cast. Among the stirring scenes is the attack on the gold bullion caravan going overland to the Union army.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

ALL TYPES OF MINDS

Bridge advertises the general type of mind you posses. Is yours over-bold, over-timid, over-hasty, over-slow, prone to resentfulness when you are bluffed, or likely to be frightened by fakers? Despite the way that psychic bidders have been shown up in recent years, there still are plenty of players who let such adventurers kid them out of games and slams.

(Dealer: East. Neither side vulnerable.)

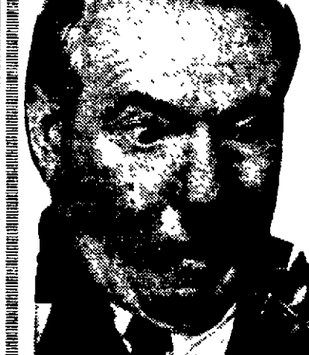
After passes by East and South, West started the bidding with 1-Club. North doubled this and East redoubled. South put in a bid of 1-Spade, which West passed and North raised to 2-Spades, whereupon all passed.

The North-South cards will produce game in spades or in no trump, but their holders allowed themselves to be influenced by the bidding of the opponents. North should have injected a bid of 2-No Trumps instead of a simple raise to 2-Spades. South then would have had no hesitancy in raising to game. With the amount of honor strength held by North, it should have been apparent o him that if West had enough strength for an opening bid, East certainly did not have enough for a redouble.

East had plenty of nerve to make the psychic redouble he did, but in this case his courage was rewarded.

* * *

Monday's Problem.



(Dealer: North. Neither side vulnerable.)

How should South play for 4-Hearts, the original lead having been the diamond Q?

Today's Recipe.

HONEY COOKIES — One-half cup butter, one-half cup sugar, one egg, beaten; one-half cup honey, two cups sifted flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, one cup finely chopped nuts. Cream the butter and add the sugar gradually. Mix the egg and honey and add with the sifted ingredients and nuts to the butter-and-sugar mixture. Chill the dough, then form into a roll the desired size and wrap in heavy waxed paper. When firm, cut into thin slices with a sharp knife. Bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees F.) from 10 to 15 minutes, or until lightly browned.

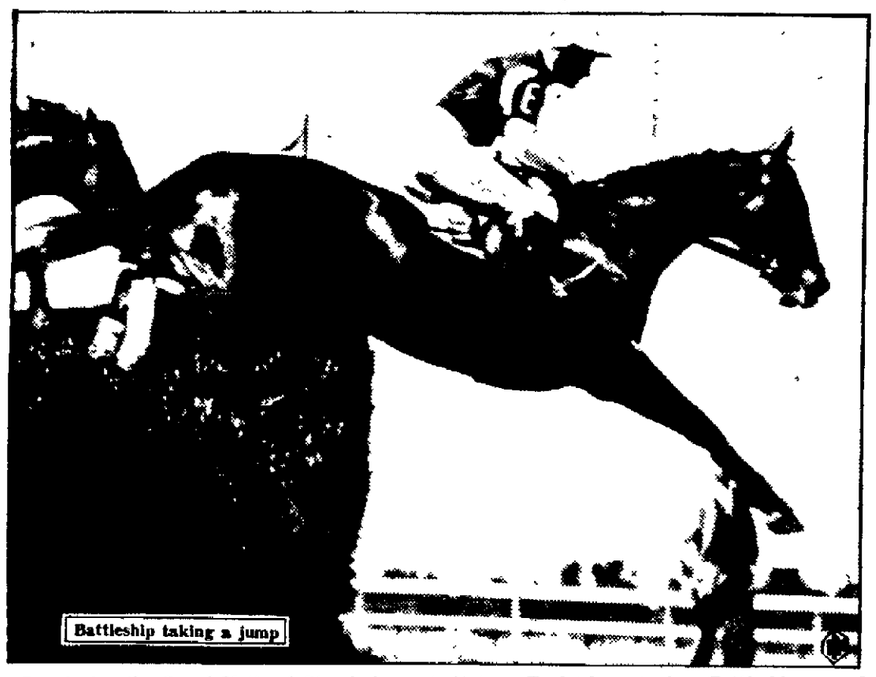
Son of Man O'War Pretty Good, Too



In winning the Grand National Steeplechase at Aintree, England, yesterday, Battleship, owned by Mrs. Marion Scott, an American sportswoman, became the second American-trained horse to win the classic. Battleship is a son of Man O'War, famous sire of a long string of outstanding racers.

Sports' Brilliant Record Marred

Yuncker Club Handed First Defeat of Season by Lorain in Willard Cage Tourney.

By CHARLES MARTIN

YUNCKER Sports tumbled from the list of unbeaten Ohio amateur basketball clubs last night.

Sporting a brilliant record of 15 straight victories, the Yuncker outfit ran into the touted Thew Shovels of Lorain on the Willard high hardwood in an opening round game of the Class A division of the annual Willard Independent tournament, and finished on the short end of a 30 to 24 score.

Lorain Stages Rally.

A desperate last-half rally enabled the Lorain outfit to come from behind to top the Sports. Yunckers hopped into the lead in the opening minutes of the contest and completely dominated the opening half.

But once Lorain's fast-breaking attack began to function, it soon overcame the lead piled up by the Yuncker club, and mid-way in the third stanza took an advantage it never relinquished.

The Sports looked like anything but the club that had marched through the season without a setback. Spotty passing and erratic shooting were the principal faults of the team.

Numerous under basket shots were wasted in the second half on fumbles.

The Yuncker outfit hopped into the lead in the opening seconds and at the first quarter led, 7 to 3. The club continued to add to its lead and at the half was ahead, 15 to 8. And then Lorain came to life.

Limiting the Sports to a bucket and free throw, the Thew outfit began hitting with regularity and went ahead, 22 to 18, at the three-quarter mark And from there on in it was too bad.

Lorain, led by Balaric, increased its lead to a 26 to 18 advantage at the opening of the final chapters, failed to provide the punch to overtake it

BBalaric set the individual pace with 11 points, while Tom Farrell topped the Mansfielders with eight.

Champions Advance.

The Birmingham Fireman, defending champions, advanced to the semi-finals in the A division by defeating the Ashland Merchant, 33 to 27. The Merchants lineup included Bub Hockinsmith, Bob Sprague and Bill Scobey, former Ashland high stars.

Donkey basketball, a craze in the eastern section of the States this year, has proved popular in Ohio, playing to capacity crowds everywhere.

The opening show will get under way at 2 p. m., with the evening comedy tagged for 8 p. m.

As a preliminary attraction, the Mansfield Queen Bee cage team, composed of all-stars of the Church Class B league, will tackle the Ashland Y. M. C. A. club at 7 p. m.

Hire Alexander, Pay Him Bonus

BATON ROUGE, La.—(AP)—Hugh Alexander, young outfielder who came up from Springfield, O., last fall, won't be out of a job with the Cleveland Indians although the loss of his hand in an accident last winter cost him a chance to play. Alexander said the Tribe gave him a job as a scout and volunteered to pay the $1,000 bonus he had been promised if he could stick with the club this season.

Teams Share Tourney Melon

COLUMBUS —(AP)— The state high school board of athletic control will decide next Friday night, as an "all fools' day" present, just what bonuses and adjusted compensation should be paid the 32 teams in the recent state basketball wars.

H. R. Townsend, state athletic commissioner, said today the board would get together the evening of April 1 to "slice up a pretty fair-sized melon," consisting of a portion of the state athletic association's share of receipts from county, sectional, district and the state cage meets.

The commissioner said that about $6,500 would be divided among the teams, most of it going to state tournament entrants, and some going back to teams eliminated in district play.

Townsend said the state board was "perfectly satisfied" with the present method of handling the state tournament over a three-day stretch in a single week, and would not consider stretching it to a four-day event played on two consecutive week-ends.

SEABISCUIT FAVORITE IN MEXICAN RACE

AGUA CALIENTE, Mex.—(UP)—Visitors streamed into this historic border spa today for a week-end of racing that will be topped Sunday with the $12,500-added Agua Caliente handicap, first major prize offered here since the Mexican government banned gambling in 1934.

Most of the turf fans were lured by a single attraction—Charles S. Howard's mighty Seabiscuit.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J.—(UP)—Michigan's defending Wolverines trailed Ohio State by two points today with five events remaining in the 15th annual N. C. A. A. swimming championships.

Reformed Mungo, 'In Fine Shape', Figures Brooklyn in Top Division

By DILLON GRAHAM, Associated Press Sports Writer.

CLEARWATER, Fla.—Van Lingle Mungo, looking just as solemn as a hoot owl perched on a limb, sat back on his haunches in the Dodgers' dugout here the other day and declared he had signed the pledge.

Loafing around his Pageland, S. C., home this winter, Mungo went into a huddle with himself, added up his assets and liabilities, and arrived at the conclusion he hadn't been figuring the angles correctly.

"I haven't had a drink since before Christmas," he said, not without a touch of pride.

Expects Good Season.

The Great Reformation seemingly has caught Mungo and Dizzy Dean of the Cardinals the same year—the National league's two best right-handers. Dizzy has every one confused over at St. Petersburg by his dignified actions around the St. Louis Cardinal camp.

"I'm in better shape than I've been in five years," Mungo declared. "And, if I have as good a season as I expect, you can just figure Brooklyn into that first division picture somewhere."

Van Lingle Mungo is a spirited competitor and a hard loser. He gives all he has and he goes raving mad when he can't seem to toss that ball the way he knows he can.

That was the trouble last season when he jumped the Dodgers, he says. He'd won nine games and lost only four before the Fourth of July and it looked like a fine season for him. Then he hurt his arm and back pitching against the Giants. He couldn't seem to get going after that. They said the trouble lay in his tonsils. But he was no better after having them extracted. So finally he just tossed a nice roughhouse in St. Louis and took French leave of the club—drawing a suspension without pay.

And the year before his periodic outbursts were featured by a battle royal with other Brooklyn mates in a Pittsburgh hotel. He's been so intent on winning that he has welcomed a scrap on the field with any and all, and has drawn more than his share of fines from the arbiters.

Times Have Changed.

But that was before the reform movement caught up with him. He says he is serious about this alteration of his pattern of living and will bear down to pass the 20-game victory mark this season.

Mungo took the occasion to deny the reports that he and Manager Burleigh Grimes couldn't get along. He asserted he had never said he wouldn't pitch another game for "Boily," a story that whipped about the loop after he ditched the Dodgers.

"Burleigh is all right. You're bound to disagree with other people sometime and I haven't always seen eye-to-eye with Grimes. But he's okay. He's just like me, a hard fighter, and a hard loser. Nothing tastes good to us after we've taken a licking."

MUNGO . . . the net stops grounders.

Barons Close Home Season

CLEVELAND —(INS)— Making their final home appearance of the regular season, the Cleveland Barons tackle the Pittsburgh Hornets tonight in an attempt to sew up first place in the International-American Hockey league.

A victory or a tie for Cleveland, either tonight or in the final game of the schedule at Syracuse tomorrow night, will give the Barons a point total guaranteeing first place. With the top spot goes the important concession of having preference in rinks for the play-offs.

'SCHOOLBOY' CLAIMS ARM AS GOOD AS EVER

LAKELAND, Fla. — (AP) — Schoolboy Rowe, still the big mystery of the Detroit Tigers camp as he stepped out for a second test against Cincinnati, claims his arm is as good as ever. After giving up five hits to Detroit Wednesday he said Coach Del Baker had advised him not to bear down, adding "I had as much stuff as I ever had in my life."

YANKS DISCOVER FAULT IN GORDON'S PLAY

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — (AP) —The New York Yankees are discovering that young Joe Gordon is a little short of perfection as a second baseman. One of his bad habits is to hold onto the ball and run a few steps while relaying a throw from the outfield and the Yanks fear smart base runners will notice it and beat his throws to the plate.

Indian Vets, Rookie Hold A's Helpless

Harder, Galehouse, Milnar Allow 3 Hits in 7-1 Win.

NEW ORLEANS —(UP)— Two veterans and a rookie today had given other American league clubs a demonstration of why the Cleveland Indians are credited with having the finest pitching staff in the circuit.

Mel Harder, Denny Galehouse and Al Milnar worked an exhibition game here yesterday against the Philadelphia Athletics and gave the proteges of Connie Mack only three hits. The Indians won the contest 7 to 1.

Holds A's at Bay.

Harder, who had appeared in poor form last Sunday against the New York Giants, came back to hurl three brilliant innings. He did not permit a runner to reach first base during his time on the mound.

Galehouse gave up all three of the Athletics' hits in the four rounds he toiled and Milnar blanked them in the last two sessions.

While the Indians were receiving masterful pitching, the mound work of the Athletics was decidedly inferior. The Tribe combed three of Mack's hurlers for 15 hits, four of which were good for extra bases.

Cleveland was off to a fast start, scoring three times in the first inning. Two more runs were added in the fourth and one each in the fifth and sixth.

Lead Tribe at Bat.

Roy Weatherly and Hal Trosky were the hitting stars of the day. Weatherly secured four safeties and Trosky three.

Cleveland was scheduled for games today and tomorrow at Baton Rouge against the New York Giants.

ZIVIC NO MATCH FOR SLAUGHTERING HENRY

DETROIT—(UP)—There may be a fighter who can halt Henry Armstrong's skyrocket rise to the puglistic heights, but it won't be Eddie Zivic of Pittsburgh. Zivic was beaten last night at Olympia stadium in four rounds by the coffee-colored 126-pound champion.

After two minutes and 35 seconds of fighting in the fourth round the Pittsburgh fighter collapsed across the ropes, and his seconds threw in the towel.

PHILADELPHIA — Jersey Joe Walcott, 187½, Merchantville, N. J., knocked out Art Sykes, 190, Elmira, N. Y., (4).

RANDOM SHOTS

DOTS 'N' DASHES—Tommy Henrich, Massillon's (and Cleveland's, too) gift to the Yankees, may lose a chance to play regularly because of his inability to hit lefthanded hurling consistently. . . . One of the teams that participated in the Moose tournament last week-end consisted of a county prosecutor, clerk of courts, a physician and two dentists, all from Steubenville. And it had Jack Stoehr, the fraternity's regional director, as No. 1 rooter.

WHETHER Mansfield is represented in the Ohio State league or not, the city will have baseball. Plans for the formation of a semi-pro team have already been inaugurated. . . . Elmer Smith Cleveland's old slugger, who once wore the Westinghouse livery, has been named manager of the Kelier News of Norwalk, where an enclosed field has been erected.

Ashland high has a pretty good reason for keeping athletic affiliations with Mansfield. As Bill McKee, Ashland scribe, says, "Mansfield is the rich uncle of Ashland high athletics" Every year that the Tyger gridsters play in the neighboring city, Ashland's receipts show a profit. And when Ashland plays here, a deficit results. . . . A company specializing in hair removing has organized a baseball team. One of the games is scheduled with the House of David, which, you know, specializes in beards

Basketball officials annoyed by spectators' booing should attend a Mexican bull fight. Mexican fans not only throw cushions and other missiles, but set fire to the stands to show displeasure. Nice peeples, heh! . . . Ouch: "Unless he has improved over last year, Bill Knickerbocker would do the Yankees more good by remaining with the Browns," says Connie Mack.

Castleman Drills With Schoolboys

BATON ROUGE, La—(AP)—The New York Giants' pitching prospects, a trifle off color now, may look better is Clydell Castleman's training methods work out. Although he has refused to come to camp and train according to Manager Bill Terry's ideas, the Giants have heard Castleman is working out with a high school team at Nashville. And Terry has admitted he might forgive the hurler if he needs him badly enough.

Puts Stratton Against Hart

Tim Nolan Signs Pair For Semi-Finals Monday.

Tim Nolan, boss man of the Quality athletic club, believes Frankie Hart, Holland light-heavyweight, was caught "off stride" when he was thrown by the Great Mephisto, ex-champion, this week.

Giving Hart the benefit of the doubt, Nolan has matched him with Walter Stratton of Leetonia in the semi-final bout on Monday night's grapple show at the Armory, with the idea of giving the Hollander a later crack at Mephisto if he wins next week.

"If Hart can beat Stratton," stated Nolan, "maybe this situation can be ironed out. If he does, I'll be in position to contact Mephisto in regard to another match in Mansfield."

They will wrestle for two falls with a time limit of 45 minutes, augmenting the tiff billed between Joe Magyar, Hungarian Hercules, and Frankie Talaber, Chicago menace

It will be "Ladies Night" and all members of the fair sex will be admitted free if accompanied by escorts.

Redlegs Again Show Promise; Youngsters Hold Fate of Club

By GEORGE KIRKSEY

TAMPA Fla —(UP)—The Cincinnati Reds are burning up the grapefruit league again this year, and are attracting serious attention

Last year they looked like a potential pennant threat, but when they got back north they folded up and finished 40 games behind the champion New York Giants The Reds are definitely a team of promise but it might be well to withhold judgment until the season opens.

William Boyd McKechnie, who was voted the outstanding pilot in the majors last season, has taken over the Reds replacing Chuck. Dressen McKechnie was lured away from the Boston Bees by a $25,000 contract

He's a Shrewd Pilot.

McKechnie is a shrewd Scotchman who may be counted upon to get the absolute maximum out of the Reds' material Bill does not think he has a last place ball club on his hands.

"The future of the Reds depends upon how our young players come along," he said

The young fellows McKechnie had in mind were outfielders Harry Craft and Dusty Cooke, first Baseman Frank McCormick Catcher Willard Hershberger and Pitchers Whitey Moore and John Vandermeer. These six players hold the fate of the Reds.

Craft, a 23-year-old outfielder who graduated to the Reds via Waterloo and Syracuse, looks like a great find. He can hit, run throw and field, and has won the centerfield job hands down. Cooke, who once had a try-out with the Yankees, is back up from Minneapolis where he hit .345 last season and is the leading left field candidate. The other outfield job is being taken care of by Ival Goodman

Frank McCormick who comes from New York City, will start the season at first base The rest of the infield will be the same as last year with Alex Kampouris at second Bill Myers at short stop and Lew Riggs at third This infield seems adequate enough defensively but may be lacking somewhat in hitting strength.

Hershberger, the scrappy youngster from the pennant winning Newark International club, has made a big impression on McKechnie and it is quite possible that he may win the No. 1 receivers job over Ernie Lombardi and Virgil Davis.

Pitching Bright Spot.

One of the brightest spots on the Cincinnati club is the pitching staff, which might take the Reds far. The big three probably will be Lee Grissom Paul Derringer and Gene Schott

'Dusty' Cook Sure of Job

TAMPA, Fla. — (UP) — In 1936, Allan (Dusty) Cooke was waived out of the American league because of his inability to hit. With the Boston Red Sox that season he had the mediocre mark of .273.

Last year Cooke made a brilliant comeback with the Minneapolis Millers in the American association and today he was headed for a regular major league berth with the Cincinnati Reds.

Cooke, whose play has been one of the outstanding features of the Reds' training campaign, played sterling ball again yesterday as Cincinnati dropped a 4 to 2 decision in an exhibition game with the Brooklyn Dodgers. Cooke secured four hits in five trips to the plate. The only other Redleg player to make more than one hit was Tony Bingiovanni.

Manager Bill McKechnie definitely is set upon Cook as a regular He has not decided however, whether to play him in right or left field.

COURT RULES ON CAR MORTGAGES

Holds They Must Be Filed With Clerk of Courts as Provided by New Law.

A state supreme court ruling today required that all chattel mortgages on automobiles be filed with the county clerk of courts instead of the county recorder, in compliance with the Ohio certificate of title law which became effective Jan. 1.

The decision was given in a suit filed by the City Loan and Savings company, Wapakoneta, against the Auglaize county recorder, who is said to have refused to accept chattel mortgages on autos.

Howard P. Wenning, Richland county recorder, estimated that the ruling will cause his office to lose about one-fourth of its annual income which last year amounted to more than $11,000.

Wenning has been accepting all automobile chattel mortgages presented at his office since the first of the year. A part of the mortgages, however, have been filed by Clerk of Courts Fred R. Zellner since the certificate of title law went into effect.

The shift from the recorder's to the clerk's office under the new law increases the fee for filing mortgages from 24 cents to 30 cents. An additional 25-cent charge will be made for each copy of the lien issued from the clerk's office.

A suit started by Atty. H. M. Rust, Mansfield, to test the validity of the certificate of title law is pending in Richland county common pleas court. At a hearing six weeks ago, Judge C. H. Huston refused to grant a temporary injunction restraining the clerk of courts from issuing the certificates, and continued the case indefinitely.

It's Odd

But It's Science.

LOS ANGELES — (AP) — Folks who talk too loud now have another scientific reason for modulating their voices.

A loud sound seems to the human ear to last just twice as long as it really does. Experiments proving this are reported by Dr.

Vern O. Knudsen, of the University of California at Los Angeles.

With the aid of electrical instruments in the laboratory it was shown that the ear sometimes responds to sounds of short duration in an unexpected manner.

"A tone," Dr. Knudsen reports, "having a loudness level of 80 decibles and sounding for two-tenths of a second produces approximately the same sensation of 'apparent duration' as does a tone having a loudness level of 40 decibles but sounding for four-tenths of a second."

Dr. Knudsen predicts that the study of the physical nature of music will have practical results.

"Thus," he states, "we may contribute the raw material from which there will surely emerge a new and superior musical art, free from the imperfections inherent in existing musical instruments, and enhanced with finer and more logical pitch and intensity gradations, better tonal qualities, and more pleasing harmonies, rhythms and forms than man has yet experienced."

2 New Police Cars to Be Put In Service in Few Days.

The Mansfield police department today had two new armored cruisers which will be placed in service within a few days.

The machines were driven in from Detroit by Police Chief Meade K. Bates and Hollis Moorhead of the firm of R. E. Moorhead, Ford dealer, who was awarded the contract for the cars by the city board of control.

Both cruisers have been armor plated and one equipped with the latest model short wave receiving set. The other car is in the shop for installation of the radio taken from the used crusier which was traded in.

Both have the bullet - proof equipment installed behind the radiator grill and under the hood and have the same appearance of an ordinary pleasure car, except for the heavy bullet-proof windshield with its gunport.

LOST LADY + + +

CHAPTER XXVIII

Sheer good luck had thrown into his hands this American girl who was such a friend of his new wife—Dolores—and of the other gringoes. Yes, you had to admit Americans stuck together. His wife—Dolores, otherwise the former Sue Castle—wouldn't leave her chum in the lurch. Dolores had beat it and was now holed up at La Luz....but word that Carmen was in his hands would bring her out of her hole. Not only bring her out, but bring a very substantial ransom along with her. Por dios! That Sue Castle — Dolores — was rich. Tremendously rich. And she was his wife. And if these Americans and the people at La Luz thought for a minute that he was going to let her get away from him, they were poor guessers.

Red Vasquez had still another glass of tequila.

No, the way was clear now. He had Carmen. Carmen would buy all that he wanted—Dolores—wealth.

Dolores. He cursed viciously—at himself. That wild shot of his when, blind with anger, he had taken a couple of shots at that interfering fool Pablo. Dolores had squealed and grabbed her shoulder. But she was still sitting up when Pablo drove away...with a bullet or two in him, too. Probably it wasn't a serious injury. He hoped not, sincerely. Not because Dolores was his wedded wife, but because she meant a fortune to him. When he got the fortune...until he got the fortune....Dolores was valuable property. And now he would have to set about getting her back from La Luz—or wherever she had gone with that Pablo. But undoubtedly La Luz. It would be easy to find out.

* * *

Red Vasquez drained his glass and looked at the fast emptying tequila bottle.

Why, he wondered, had Carmen left her friends at La Luz and come to Tijuana alone at night. As though running away! Going to San Diego, she was. Maybe on business for Dolores. Maybe to get money. Oh. well, it didn't matter why. The big fact was that he had a hostage for Dolores . . . a hostage who would have to function in his favor—or be sent to the terrible prison island of Santa Maria. His frame-up was perfect.

Vasquez took another glass of tequia. Toasted himself.

"Lucky break," he said.

He had to ask Sue's jailer for another bottle of tequila before he tossed off his final drink. But he handled his liquor well, as he had heard the gringoes express it.

He confronted Sue in her prison chamber.

"My wife," he said, "is at La Luz, I suppose."

"She is," assented Sue. "Safe at La Luz—after you tried to kill her."

"No, that was an accident," explained Vasquez. "Are you fool enough to think I would try to kill Sue Castle—the heiress? And my wife?"

She started. Looked as Vasquez. But the man was in earnest. She sighed with relief; her secret was still her secret.

"And it is with respect to my wife that I want to give you your orders. It is up to you to get her to return to me—here. I give you twenty-four hours. You will write to her. You will tell her that unless she returns to me within that time, her dear friend Carmen will head for Santa Maria. Yes, that you can understand, eh? One word from me to the proper person . . Well, you know how swift is Mexican justice. In two days from now either Dolores will be here or you will be sailing to Santa Maria—a most unpleasant place."

Carmen—Sue—could not repress a shudder of terror, but she regained control quickly. She would have to communicate with Dolores as Vasquez commanded. But . . she didn't, at that moment, see how . . . but there would be at least a chance that between them they could again outwit this red brute who thought he had them in his grasp.

"Send me the materials to write with, then," agreed Sue. "But—it may take more than twenty-four hours. Dolores is badly injured. She may not be able to move just yet."

"You do the writing," rasped Vasquez. "I'll do the thinking."

* * *

One of Vasquez's spies, stationed to watch the only road entering Tijuana from the south, promptly reported the arrival of a car from La Luz—a car containing the Kilbournes, Jose and Pablo.

Vasquez and Gregorio were seated in a small, inconspicuous cantina having an early morning glass—and waiting. Why Carmen had left her friends to come alone to Tijuana, alone and at night, they could not guess.

"But what of it?" demanded Vasquez. "We know what they will do—when they discover that I've got her."

"Sure, sure," assented Vasquez's chief yes-man.

"And so," continued Vasquez, "you will now go and find one of them—or all of them—and tell them that I have Carmen in my charge. Also that she will be released only when the girl who calls herself Dolores, and who is my legal wife, is delivered to me."

Gregorio rose to obey.

"And make sure whether or not Don Ponce Robles came with the others," his master called.

He shook his head as Gregorio departed. "That Don Ponce. He acts queerly. I don't understand him. I wonder if he could have any interest in Dolores—Miss Castle—Mrs. Vasquez?"

Gregorio had little difficulty finding some of the people he sought. He came upon Don Murray and Pablo in front of the Kentucky Bar. He stopped them politely enough, delivered Vasquez's message, and then bade them "adios."

For a moment Murray glared at his retreating back, took a step forward—but Pablo laid a hand upon his arm, restraining him.

"It would do no good, Don Murray," he advised. "It is Red Vasquez we want, not one of his dogs."

"But—Sue," said Murray. "In the hands of that villain."

"Remember that he does not know she is Miss Castle," replied Pablo. "She is quite safe, I think. Vasquez holds her only to secure recovery of the women he thinks is really the heiress."

"That's true," assented Murray, and sighed with relief.

ANALYSTS FIND CHEERING NEWS ON STEEL SIDE

Hear Reports Production in Youngstown District Will Be Stepped Up.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Slightly lower prices predominated in today's early stock market dealings.

At an active opening declines were registered for Western Union, Phillips Petroleum, General Electric, Pennsylvania, Bethlehem Steel and General Motors.

Unchanged to up a shade were Chrysler, Douglas Aircraft and N. Y. Central.

Although boardroom spirits were at an extremely low ebb before the opening, analysts called attention to a few moderately cheering news items.

On the side of steels were forecasts that the production in the Youngstown district next week would be stepped up to 30 per cent of capacity. Slowly expanding orders for the metal were reported and steel company officials were said to be more hopeful that April and May will find operations back to at least half of normal.

Study was given figures of the commerce department disclosing that the large export balance which the United States has maintained in its foreign trade since October continued through February, the total being 13 per cent greater than in the same 1937 month while imports were down 41 per cent.

EX-INMATE PAYS WITH HIS LIFE

Jones Talks for Five Minutes In Death Chamber, Then Sits in Chair, Dies.

he produced a paper and in a calm, steady voice, read a 650-word statement. He walked into the death chamber, erect and steady.

"Ohio, I am a product of your prisons," he said. "Who can blame me? The anti-social acts committed by me are no indication of the true me. My death is not ignoble. I am giving my life for a friend. My crimes were only moral protests against a society which has treated me rottenly.

"The very fact that I hated these things shows that I was fundamentally decent. . . . I saw around me a lot of lucky, indifferent people, outside of prison only by the laws of chance."

The doomed man, who knew that he would die within the next few minutes, said "I never considered myself entirely responsible for the robberies that sent me back to prison," explaining that tensions far beyond the power of any human being to withstand were forced upon me. . . . If I had had a single understanding friend when I was young, if my mother hadn't died, if my father had been a pal, with just a minimum chance I could have made a comfortable place for myself in the world."

He expressed the belief that in the near future "a more humane method of penology will be evolved" and "it will not be necessary to lock thousands of men in cells and permit them to rot their days away in idleness."

Spent 12 Years in O. S. R.

Jones, who is said to have come from an old pioneer family of McConnellsville, had spent 19 of his 33 years behind prison walls, 12 of them in the Mansfield reformatory. In a story which he wrote while serving time in Ohio penitentiary, just before he was released the last time, he told of having been sent to the boys reform school when he was a child and of the unbearable cruelties suffered there from other boys who set themselves up as "bosses," and of how he had learned to hate all signs and symbols of law enforcement during the seven years he spent there.

He came to the Mansfield institution on Oct. 22, 1924, when he was 19 years old—soon after leaving the reform school—from Morgan county on a burglary and larceny charge, under sentence from one to 15 years. On June 1, 1929, he was paroled, but was returned as a parole violator seven months later. On April 1, 1932, he began serving sentence of one to 7 years for grand larceny which had brought him back as a violator. Again he was paroled on Aug. 1, 1935.

This time he had everything in his favor. Mansfield people interested in him had aided in obtaining his parole; his father had died and left him a comfortable sum of money; he went to an excellent position in a publisher's office. But before the first month of his freedom was over he was back behind the walls of the reformatory as a parole violator. He had stolen a wrist watch, which meant less than nothing to him.

In November, 1936 he was transferred to the penitentiary as a second-term convict, and there he served out his maximum sentence. He had been released only a few months when he and Barnes perpetrated the Fourth of July hold-up which sent Jones to his death last night and Barnes to life imprisonment.

While Jones was in Mansfield, he wrote for The New Day, prison paper, and his writing attracted notice from nationally known writers. He had planned to embark on a writing career when he was paroled in 1935.

As soon as Jones finished his statement last night he sat down in the electric chair, which was at 8:34. Six minutes later he was pronounced dead. No one had claimed his body today and Warden J. C. Woodard said he would be buried in the prison's potters field.

about. I feel as though I had been doubly bereft. She was just like my own daughter."

As the two families united, Donald tossed on a jail cot, unable to get the remembrance of the dying Charlotte out of his mind. He had been in the police line-up, arraigned for homicide and held without bail, and had been made to recite again the details of the tragedy.

"Both of us felt around to find Charlotte's heartbeat and the best place to aim at," he told District Attorney Charles P. Sullivan.

"I told Charlotte to hold her breath for a second and then resume breathing, and from the renewed thumping of the heart we decided where to place the shot.

"Charlotte wanted to fire the shot herself. She kept telling me not to die, that it was not necessary, but she only wanted to die. Both of us placed the muzzle of the gun against Charlotte's heart. She was holding on to the barrel, and I pulled the trigger."

Foes of Government Reorganization Concede Defeat

Not That It Matters

—By JANE WILLIAMS

THERE is a widespread but erroneous impression in America that the German people have had Adolf Hitler crammed down their throats and that they shout "Heil Hitler!" only because they must—or else. And that behind their air of acceptance is a deep resentment.

Which isn't altogether true. Hitler means to most German people what Roosevelt meant to the great majority of us in 1932; a savior with a powerful fist; a Moses to lead us out of an economic wilderness, to give us new national life with a new set of commandments.

In the first ecstacy of our belief in Roosevelt's supernatural powers to lead us out of darkness into light, actually millions of Americans would gladly have accepted him as an absolute dictator, as in fact he was that first four years. He offered us a program for what he believed would be economic Utopia.

* * *

HITLER, the moody little orator who had shouted political speeches to the apple trees in his father's orchard when a boy, rose up as the New Prophet and leader. He offered them a 25-point program which, even in its phrasing, must have wiped the bitter dust of humiliation from their nostrils; he offered to lead them in repudiating every word of the Versailles treaty, including moral responsibility for the World war, war reparations to the allies; the right to arm, to reclaim lost, valuable territory, to stabilize their currency, to unite into one big state all of the German people of Europe.

* * *

THE desperate and despairing Germans clutched at this glittering program. As who wouldn't? We Americans did the same thing. The only difference has been that Hitler, with mailed fist and boot, has carried out that program. Of course, there were many heads rolling in the gutters, and the rest of the world was appalled. But the map of Europe changed and Hitler gave Germany what he promised.

In America the Promised Land failed to materialize; the program didn't work out, and therefore we feel ever so superior to a people who unprotestingly accepted a dictator. Yet we might do exactly the same thing today if there were two cars in every garage—as was promised. We'd hail Roosevelt as our savior, accept him as our dictator, and fall on our faces before him—if his program had worked.

* * *

THERE have been two fundamental differences between the German and the American programs for recovery. Hitler's plan called for full capacity production in every line of agriculture and industry; Roosevelt's was curtailment in order to keep prices up, and as a result we are buying a goodly share of what we eat and wear from foreign nations—thus giving their workers employment while ours are idle.

There is no unemployment in Germany among the able bodied. The unemployed in this country approximates that of the greatest depression figure, possibly 12 million. And we've spent more than 12 and a half billions of dollars (federal and state fund) to provide them with jobs. The money is gone along with the jobs.

In America we KNOW that our program has not been a success; that it has not delivered us from our economic woes; but the German people know only what Hitler's high powered propagandists tell them; what is drilled into them day after day—that Germany's star is rising to new heights.

Is it difficult to believe, then, that the rank and file of Germans are loyal to the man the rest of the world fears and distrusts?

* * *

MOOM PITCHERS: "Snow White" came within $3 of shattering the all time box office record of the Ohio for a picture show, which is still held by "Saratoga." The management said several hundred persons came twice to see the Disney picture, and many of them returned for a third look. Because it was shown here during Lent, it will probably be brought back within a few weeks...A production will be made of King Arthur and Sir Launcelot. Please, God, don't let the well-fed Errol Flynn be cast as Launcelot, my favorite knight. Could I have Frederic March for Launcelot, Leslie Howard for King Arthur, Merle Oberon for Queen Guinevere, and any lily-like dumbbell for the the Maid of Astalot?...

Going over the 20-year-ago-today newspapers, recalls names that were famous then and forgotten now: Rhea Mitchell, Carlisle Blackwell, Bessie Barriscale, Louise Glaum, Clara Kimball Young, Ruth Roland, William S. Hart, George Beban, Thomas Stanschi, and J. Warren Kerrigan. How many of today's stars will be remembered 20 years from now?

* * *

IT IS DIFFICULT for the person equipped with only average intelligence to understand the motives of those in authority. In Wednesday's papers were pictures of the two young daughters of Marie Rasputin, granddaughters of the so-called Mad Monk of Russia, who sought permission, at our doors, to come into America to join their mother, who is with Ringling Brothers circus. These children who have been in school in Paris are homeless and country-less. If they return to Russia, they are almost certain to die. But we refused them entrance after they had crossed the ocean, even though their mother can well support them.

In yesterday's papers are Mr. Hull's plans to bring 15,000 homeless and unemployed refugees to America for sanctuary.

It doesn't make sense to me, either.

Oil Deal With Japanese Denied by Mexico

MINISTER TELLS U. S. JAPS NEVER MADE PROPOSAL

Expropriated Companies to Sell to Only Democratic Countries, Envoy Says.

(By International News Service)

MEXICO CITY—The Mexican government was on record today with a flat denial of reports that it planned an oil deal with Japan.

Mexico's disclaimer of the rumors was obtained personally from Foreign Minister Eduardo Hay by United States Ambassador Josephus Daniels.

Hay assured Daniels that products of Mexico's oil industry, expropriated a week ago from its British and American owners, would be sold only to "democratic countries."

The American ambassador sent a report on Hay's statements to the state department in Washington.

Planned Pipe-Line, Report.

Daniels acted following receipt of reports from Tokyo that Japan was offering itself as a customer for about 500,000 barrels of Mexican oil each year.

Other rumors had stated Japan would co-operate with Mexico in building a long pipe-line across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec and would send experts to Mexico to aid in construction of oil harbor works.

But Daniels quoted Hay as stating:

"No such offer has come from Japan. The foreign office has not heard of it.

"The Mexican government has the fullest and most confident expectation of selling oil to democratic countries with which Mexico is in complete sympathy."

The finance ministry proposed that the 17 American and British companies whose properties were confiscated indemnify themselves by taking 75 per cent of Mexico's oil output until they receive the value of their expropriated holdings.

Authorities calculated about $500,000,000 must be paid to the companies by the Mexican government.

Items about spring are hardly complete until the fishermen add their story. And they are more than mildly encouraged over this year's fishing prospects. Those unable to go to Lake Erie, where the catches are bigger 'n' better, are plying their hooks in surrounding waters with good results. Down around Bellville, the Clearkfork has been supplying some fine messes, "measuring as long as 16 inches," reports one.

Mansfielders who planned to attend the Cherry Blossom festival in Washington, D. C., this year, will be disappointed, for there won't be a festival this year. Those few days of unseasonably warm weather played havoc with Washington plans. Announcements were sent out today that the blossoms will be in full bloom tomorrow and probably will last a week. There will be fireworks around the tidal basin Monday night which will be the extent of the celebration this year.

Richard Maxwell's book of poems and philosophy, "Comfort and Cheer" is well into its second edition. One individual order was for 500 of the books, purchased by an eastern philanthropist who distributed them to shut-ins. The former Mansfield man returns to the Columbia air lanes at 10:30 a. m. Monday, and will be heard daily except Thursdays. His absence brought a deluge of letters to Radio Guide, national "shop" magazine.

Sometimes a dog's devotion to man can be too realistic, a Mansfield policeman decided today. Called to a North Main street address to "run in" a drunk, the officer found the man sleeping in the street with an unfriendly police dog standing guard over him. Efforts of the officer to approach the sleeper brought growls from the dog and only after help had been called to entice the animal away with food, could the dog's master be taken to police headquarters.

There was no tea, but ice cream and cake were served in the grand jury room at the courthouse yesterday afternoon, and the little party, strangely enough, was in honor of a man who is supposed to be a critic of county activities. It was all in a farewell gesture to Wade Beyerly, state examiner, who has been stationed at the courthouse since December. He will go to Dayton today on a transfer order from the state auditor's office. Several county workers were hosts and hostesses at the party, along with Beyerly's four fellow examiners.

ADMIT LACK OF ENOUGH VOTES TO KILL BILL

Senate to Ballot Monday on Proposal to Shelve Program For Current Session.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Defeated consistently on proposed amendments, some senate foes of the administration's government reorganization bill conceded today they lacked the votes to kill the measure.

A vote on a motion to recommit the bill to committee, a step which would effectively pigeon-hole it—has been set for 3 p. m. (EST) Monday. If the motion fails, there will be a vote on passage of the measure at 5 p. m.

Predicting Passage.

Some opponents of the measure said privately that unless there was a shift of sentiment by Monday, the recommittal motion would fail. Senators Barkley of Kentucky, the Democratic leader, and Byrnes (D., S. C.), author of the bill, confidently predicted its passage.

Senator Clark (D., Mo.), an opponent, asserted, however, that he was "very hopeful" the bill would be shelved.

Two portions of the bill—creation of a welfare department and authorization for employment of six presidential assistants—already have been approved in the house.

Byrnes said it was possible that the senate bill might be substituted for one of these measures and sent directly to a conference between senate and house representatives. This would expedite final action.

Enactment of the broad reorganization program would give the administration its fourth major law of the session. Already, the farm, housing and emergency relief bills have won legislative approval.

The next big administration bill—tax revision— has undergone a week's buffeting in the senate finance committee and now bears little resemblance to the revenue measure approved by the house.

Tax Fight In Committee.

The main tax fight probably will center in a joint conference committee, which will meet to adjust differences between the senate and house bills.

The billion-dollar naval expansion bill, which already has house approval, also is expected to encounter heavy going in the senate, although most observers expect its eventual approval.

Leaders agreed that the wage and hour bill, which administration followers in the house are seeking to revive, stands only a 50-50 chance of enactment at this session.

Congressional leaders still are hopeful that the session will end between May 15 and June 1.

Hollywood Speaks—

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—It's a day of clouds. Big cottony fluffs of clouds, edges gilded silver by the sun in a blue storm-cleaned sky.

The ground of the airport is soggy with intermittent, seemingly interminable rains. Over the mountains new storm clouds press wet and gray, and thunder rolls booming over the valley. But up there—10,000 feet up—the clouds are white, the sky blue, and that is what counts.

The "Men With Wings" are going up. Their colorful planes—resurrected old Spads, Newports, Fokkers from the war days—await in trim formation. In the hangar, on a blackboard, William Wellman is diagramming the needed "shots." Closeups of fighting planes in battle action is what he wants.

* * *

Wellman's new air picture may be the one to end air pictures. It's in color—a cavalcade of aviation. His "Wings" ten years ago set a standard for air pictures since. The color is what intrigued him about this one. The big technicolor camera goes up on the camera plane, gets it all as it happens—"marvelous stuff," Wellman bubbles.

Odd, amazing chap, this Wellman they call "Wild Bill." One-tenth his energy and enthusiasm, harnessed, would solve a city's power problems. Lean, wiry, keen-eyed, he spits on "move art" and makes pictures like "Nothing Sacred—that show he knows all about it—with a vigorous punch. He's a flier himself . . . from France's Black Cat escadrille in the war . . . and crazy enough to do the deeds he asks his men to do.

The flying fool at the blackboard is Frank Clark. Not streamlined; dead-ringer for Gable; husky. "Put a feather in his ear and Frank'll take off," Wellman says. Frank's leader of the flying lunatics who call themselves movie stunt fliers. He chalks out a maneuver. "Ever done this one, Tex?"

Tex Rankin, fat, red-faced, shaggy-browed, squeaks up. It's how he talks. "Sure. A cameraman gave me hell once for it—said he could feel the wind from my wings, but hell! I was ten feet from him all the time. . . ."

* * *

They go up. They're making pictures. No "stock shots" in this one. There are no "stock shots" in color. From the ground we can see those planes, tiny zooming slits among the clouds, maneuvering for position. The camera plane splits a cloud, disappears, maneuvers back. . . . Wellman is dancing on the ground, yelling with excitement and admiration. . . . They're shooting it. . . . Power dives, tail-spins, charges at the camera plane, upside down flying. . . . More than once we swallow our hearts. . . . "That Rankin's at it again—if the cameraman had on a hat, Tex would knock it off!" . . .

They're down again. They're piling out of the planes. They're grinning and laughing, lighting cigarets. Must have been a good joke, up there. They want to know if the camera got it all. "All except that first shot—I was out of line," regretfully, "but I got plenty."

"Close call that." Ha-ha-ha-ha!

"Aw," says Tex Rankin, "I wasn't close at least 12 feet off all the time."

CITY 24TH IN OHIO IN BUYING SAVINGS BONDS

U. S. Report Shows $212,000 Invested Here During One-Year Period.

Mansfielders invested almost a quarter of a million dollars in United States savings bonds in a one-year period ending last Sept. 1, according to a report made public today by the treasury department, which ranked the city 24th among the cities and towns of the state in its per capita purchase of bonds.

The Fellowship of Prayer

Daily Lenten Devotion

By DR. WILLARD L. SPERRY

Saturday, March 26. "But I say unto you, That ye resist not evil." (Matthew 5:39). Read Matthew 13:24-30.

The doctrine of non-resistance is perhaps the one most disputed item in the teaching of Jesus.

We usually discuss it in its relation to the use of physical force. But surely this is a restriction of the idea which Jesus would not have understood. We have the same principle announced here in the tale of the wheat and the tares.

One must suppose that Jesus trusted the good wheat in the field to get the better of the weeds. The farmer is to bend all his energies to making the conditions right for his main crop, in the hope that the wheat itself will win its own victories.

Looking back over life most of us can see that this has been our moral successful; it is the flank attack that succeeds. Evil inclinations and interests have been crowded out by the more sober and decent concerns of the ongoing years. Right interests have more vitality and a longer expectation of life than wrong ones: therefore we do well to concentrate on them and let the tares take the consequence.

Prayer: Vouchsafe unto us, O Lord, a steady devotion to the things that are true, honest, just, pure, lovely, and of good report, in the confidence that with these is the secret of life: through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Sunday, March 27. "One of them shall not fall on the ground without your Father." Read Matthew 10:28-31.

Of all the hard sayings of the Gospels, this is in some ways the hardest for our generation to believe.

Years ago I was walking with a friend along a sea beach in Maine just after a "northeaster" The sullen ground swell washed up at our feet a little sea gull, battered by the storm and dying. My friend, who dearly loved animals, turned and said almost savagely: "You, who preach the Christian religion and the God who loves the fallen sparrow, explain this!"

I hazard no cheap and easy explanation. I merely suggest that most of our difficulties over belief in a God who cares for individuals have their rise in a mechanical conception of God as a kind of high-up "business manager" of the universe, who cannot possibly know, much less care for, all his workmen. The analogy, surely, is not that of a general executive, but rather of an artist who values everything he has created; the painter who keeps every charcoal study he has ever made; the poet who keeps every scrap of verse he has ever written: ourselves, who treasure through a lifetime the tentative, bungling products of the creative spirit within us.

Prayer: Almighty God, who carest for each as thou carest for all, give to us a measure of thy spirit that as we are quick to cherish our little creations, so we may learn how thou dost love thy creation; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

SATURDAY, MARCH 26, 1938.

Drive carefully tomorrow—this grand spring weather is just beginning.

The yellow race is now bleeding itself white.

Plowing.

SPRING plowing is a sort of rite with us," says a philosophic farmer in the field, as he gives his horses a breathing spell. "It's a new start. It's new hope. It's plowing under the mistakes of last year. It may be a feast—it may be a famine—but it's a new start. Plowing in the spring is more than hitching up a team of horses and getting out the plow.

"But there's a lot to think about these days as you follow the furrow. Sometimes it's better not to think. What's ahead of us we don't know. I sometimes wonder what's ahead for my children. Times change and customs change.

"I sort of hoped my boy would get interested in farming. At least he could keep a roof over his head and get enough to eat. But it seems he wants to be an aviator."

It might be worse. He might want to be a soldier. It's fine to be willing to be a soldier—but wanting to be is different.

Mexico Celebrates.

THE SOCIALIST trend in Mexico under the Cardenas administration reached a climax on March 23 in Mexico City. There was a mass demonstration and parade, said to be the greatest in Mexican history, celebrating the government's seizure of American-owned oil properties worth $400,000,000.

The demonstration was reported as including "representatives of all industries and commercial establishments," and expressed patriotic opposition to all foreigners, particularly Americans.

This sort of thing is peculiarly unfair and unwise. There was a time when our government, our industrialists and our capitalists treated Mexico and Mexicans in a high-handed way. Some of our exploiters of petroleum and gold were inexcusably domineering and high-handed. But in recent years neither our government nor our industrial captains have followed the old pattern. Washington has gone out of its way to conciliate Latin-American countries, and nowhere has the "good neighbor policy" been practiced with such generosity and patience as in Mexico.

It was somewhat reassuring to have the promise of President Cardenas, on March 22, that the seizure of oil properties would go no farther, and no similar measures were contemplated against other industries. But the celebration referred to raised the question whether the president can control the latent hostility to "gringos" that he has stirred up.

The property of course should be paid for, as Cardenas has promised, and hostile demonstrations should be officially discouraged.

Pension Revival.

HOUSE committees have favorably reported six pension bills—four of them dealing with World war service—the total cost of which would be more than $75,000,000. It seems to be a good year for pushing such bills, because the public as a whole is thinking chiefly about taxation, foreign policy and New Deal legislation. People pay little attention to the other grist poured into the congressional hopper. It is also a national election year, with all of the lower house and a third of the senate coming up for re-election and therefore seeking more than ever to please the best-organized constituents.

Each of the six bills is presented as an amendment to existing pension laws, proposing to liberalize benefits and increase the number of pensioners.

The trend of such legislation is a return to the pension systems which have long been recognized as bad and which the government sought to avoid by the war insurance and adjusted compensation measures. If that idea was wrong, then we might as well go ahead and pile pension on pension until every World war veteran and all their dependents receive something from the government. But if the idea of ending pension evils gradually was right, we should make more effort to stop the new proposals before they go too far.

Civilization's Failure.

OUR HUMAN RACE, which began in barbarism, may end in barbarism, and sooner than we have imagined. Certainly the wars now in progress and in preparation suggest it. And this last barbarism is worse than the first, because it is more fatally effective, and because it is directed by leaders who, with ages of progressive culture behind them, and a knowledge of history, should know better.

Thus the summit of our industrial civilization, which should be bringing ease, happiness and enlightenment to all mankind, begins to destroy itself, starting a downward spiral of poverty, disease and death.

Man loses the brilliant promise of his progress in natural science, for lack of moral control. Perhaps the only thing that could save the human race from its present suicidal course would be a wave of moral and spiritual enlightenment.

Retired Liners.

TWO famous ships may disappear from the transatlantic service soon. The Berengaria, now 26 years old, has been laid up some time for repairs which probably will never be made. Reconditioning the vessel for use would cost $2,000,000, and there is not enough business in sight to justify that expense.

The new liner Queen Elizabeth, sister ship of the Queen Mary, is almost ready for regular operation. When it is, the Aquitania may follow the Berengaria into oblivion. Pre-war liners cannot compete with the huge modern vessels recently built or now building.

There is some question, however, whether the new luxury ships can pay their own way. They are not only costly to build but costly to operate, and a large part of the traveling public would rather pay lower fares and travel on smaller and less ornate vessels.

The consensus of military opinion seems to be that we should keep our feet on the ground and fight in the air.

Keeping Step

—By LESLIE EICHEL

"I see," says a friend who drops in on me every once in a while, "that Joe Kennedy, our new ambassador to Great Britain, and Herbert Hoover have been calling on King George in London.

"I guess Hoover can't do any harm now—but did you notice, he no sooner called on the French premier, than the premier fell, and no sooner did he visit the Austrian president than he became an 'ex' and the whole nation was wiped out in a landslide of Nazis. That's regular Hoover luck.

"But Joe Kennedy — he's an Irishman — isn't he? And it's enough to have all the Irish patriots turn over in their graves to see an Irishman put on evening clothes and bow before a king.

"But it's a changing world. They do be saying that the kings are the democrats these days, and the dictators the tyrants.

"King George, proud father, was said to have passed the whole time speaking of his two beautiful little darlings.

"Joe, he waits his turn, then he says, "Now let me show you pictures of my nine hopefuls."

"Maybe Joe sings 'God Save the King' and maybe he doesn't. But it doesn't do any Irishman or any American any good to be hobnobbing in high British society. It's not British liquor that puts us under the table, but British flattery."

• • •

SURE, BUT—!

"What I was thinking this evening when I came over to see you—after reading the usual war headlines—was this:

"We're being told an awful lot these days that we are a part of the whole world, and that democracy is at stake, and religion is being destroyed.

"And if Britain is destroyed, we're next. Sure, sure! But Britain won't be destroyed, because it still has most of the chips in the poker game and always gets out of the game before losing all. Britain just is being tantalized now—tantalized for a showdown with those chips, at a terrible cost in innocent lives. It's a big game—and the stakes are high.

"And, as for us, we're not good poker players. We're innocents abroad."

• • •

DRIVING AT WHAT—?

"What am I driving at? You think I'm foolish, huh?

"Oh, I know it's a changing world, and we have to keep up. We've got to find a way of solving our unemployment and economic problems. And we've got to be morally on the side of innocent peoples, crushed and ruined by these dictatorship juggernauts.

"But how? By listening to tales from English—or by settling our own affairs so that humanity can have a chance here? By joining with one group of nations against another? Wouldn't it be better to try to understand them, and be friendly and trade with them—and pay no attention to family quarrels? If we enter their back yard, as sure as the sun rises over Ireland, they will be blaming us, the rich uncle from America, for bringing on all their troubles by not sharing our supposed riches with them.

"I'm glad to see an Irishman in London. Maybe he'll remember that promises to minority peoples are fulfilled only in America, where they become one people, and all are the majority.

"But when he says that if there is another war, we may not be able to stay neutral, then I begin to think he'd better stop calling on the king. Yesterday England was mad at Italy, today she's signing a pact with Italy, and the Italians are still in Spain. Nobody's saved, except a British trade route. Today, England's in a fury with Germany; tomorrow, she'll sign a pact with Germany to maintain the balance of power against Russia, or somebody else. It's awfully puzzling. Maybe Joe can't keep up. But if we can't stay neutral, what country are we to fight—and why?

"And shall we have enough money left this time so that Hoover can feed the starving?

"Maybe we ought to try to do something to see that our own hungry get three square meals a day."

The Farmer and Laborer In the West.

SAN FRANCISCO—Hope of banding the farmer and the wage-earning laborer together for political unity in this part of the country must yield to the fact that the farmer and the hired man have undergone a change.

The Si Perkins model of farmer and Ole, the hired man, might have had some mutual interest at one time, but Si Perkins long ago became a "soulless corporation," with a board of directors in a big city, possibly Chicago or New York, and Ole is joining the Hayshakers' Union to fight for overtime and his Sundays off.

Pegler

They are no more congenial than Mr. Tom Girdler and the Steel Workers Organizing committee, and the idea of their joining hands for mutual advantage is grimly humorous.

The farm is known nowadays as a farm-factory. It is organized, economized and mechanized and owned by or allied to big business and great corporation canneries adjoin the groves and fields, which are operated in units of from 1,000 to 10,000 acres.

IMPOSSIBLE TO SHRUG OFF FLIGHT.

The condition of the migratory sod-buster and picker who tincans it from crop to crop, following the seasons, has not been adequately dramatized, although John Steinbeck gave a glimpse in his story, "Of Mice and Men," and may yet spit on his hands and become the Charles Dickens of the California country slums.

These people are mostly Americans of old physically and economically impoverished stock, and it is no longer possible to shrug off the plight of the picker on the ground that he and his family are Mexicans or Orientals and therefore ineligible for honest American sympathy.

The Associated Farmers of California, an organization of big and little owners and operators, has threatened to boycott San Francisco and shop elsewhere for the members' machinery and all such tackle as farmers buy in cities, if the business men and labor leaders cannot put an end to the incessant lockouts and brawls which have made San Francisco an unreliable shopping point.

The Associated Farmers threaten not only to buy elsewhere but to ship through some other port, presumably Los Angeles, and while they were on the subject of obstreperous unions in the city they made the point that they could not permit the establishment of the closed shop or the union hiring hall in their own business. They include many small-patch operators who think their interests are identical with those of the big corporations.

• • •

HAS REMEDY FOR MARTYRISM.

This organization has been accused of fascism and has denied the aspersion, but one of the embattled big-time farmers recently revealed a plan which bespeaks the ribald mirth of the castor oil committees of Mussolini's early days.

He said that in any future fracases with the unioneers in the peaceful countryside he intended to shell them in the pants with his shotgun because Communists like to have news pictures taken for propaganda purposes showing small punctures in the chest, whereas not even a Communist can take scars of the class conflict worn on his stern.

Complicating all this, Dave Beck, the tough guy of the Teamsters' union, has been issuing regulations as to who may and may not drive a truck over the public roads of California, with a special hard glare in his eye for the small farmer who likes to combine a trip to market with a job of non-union commercial hauling on the return journey.

Thus the smallies, too, are finding reasons to resent and resist labor organizations, and the proposition, "Resolved, that the pitchfork is mightier than the wagon spoke," may yet be argued at intimate quarters on the poppy fields of the Golden State.

Infection Menace In Diabetes

—By DR. ROYAL COPELAND

IT IS only within recent years that the important relationship between infections and diabetes has been properly understood. At one time many of the serious and even fatal complications of diabetes occurred wholly because of the lack of attention to what seemed to be minor infections.

It is not long ago that it was quite common for diabetics to suffer from severe infections in the feet, demanding perhaps that the toes be amputated. This was not at all an unusual complication. Though diabetic gangrene, as it is called, is still encountered, it is not nearly as frequent as in former years.

The diabetic is extremely susceptible to infections. What would be a minor and trivial infection in one without diabetes may, if neglected, lead to a serious complication of the disease. For this reason diabetics should be instructed in the need for care of the feet and fingers. When reasonable precautions are taken, there is little danger of infection and this complication can be avoided.

According to a recent report from Bellevue hospital in New York City, certain instructions are given to all diabetic patients. These patients are warned about the care of the feet and advised as to their hygienic care. Let me tell you some of the rules that are given.

It is recommended that the diabetic soak his feet in a basin of warm, soapy water for five minutes every day. The parts should then be thoroughly dried with a turkish towel. Care should be taken to dry the skin in between the toes.

The feet should then be massaged with a little alcohol. This may be followed by massage with lanolin. Special attention should be given the soles and heels of the feet where callouses usually form.

If a diabetic suffers from ringworm or from ingrown toenail, or other disturbances of the feet, it is well that the doctor be consulted. There is no doubt that if the patient takes care of his feet and reports to the doctor at the slightest signs of infection, many of the dangerous infections will be avoided.

Of course, this care is only part of the treatment for diabetes. In addition, the disease must be treated by diet and the administration of insulin. The diet and amount of insulin must be determined by the attending physician.

Timely Editorial

She Wants Money.

What is the most frequent cause of family quarrels? Money! Wives want a larger share, or they want the say as to how family income shall be spent.

The Ladies' Home Journal reports the result of another survey to learn the opinions of women about intimate home questions. About 88 per cent of the thousands of women interviewed objected to having to ask their husbands for personal spending money.

And they had good reason. They said a woman must be well-dressed or she won't get married. After she is married she needs good clothes to keep her husband's devotion. So she ought to have her own apportionment of the partnership income to be sure to make the partnership satisfactory.

Only 48 per cent of the wives said they got housekeeping allowances, though the survey seems to prove that women by one method or another control 80 per cent of the money spent by American homes.

And here is a significant fact bearing on future policies: 94 per cent of unmarried girls questioned "issued a ultimatum" that they would demand allowances when married.—Detroit News.

What One Man Thinks

—By DAVID GIBSON

Spain.

SINCE the early dawn of the Great Ice Age, probably much longer, man has roamed through Spain.

There are his implements in flint, his many objects in bone.

Caspians came to explore—left drawings of human figures—African Negroes—in many caves.

The Magdaleneans carved now long extinct animals in ivory and horn, painted the wild horse, the bison, the woolly rhinoceros, the mammoth, frequently in brilliant colors—even in almost inaccessible cave-chambers only reached by swimming subterranean streams.

Thus, sometimes amidst magnificent stalactites, as in a dream-cathedral, they are found today, remarkable examples of prehistoric art in their startling likeness, their amazing realism and exuberant vitality—silent attestants of the observing and creative intelligence of Paleolithic man—an intelligence defying our own.

Then, many thousands of years later, a distinct race emerges out of the dim past—the Iberians—the earliest in Spain. And the Celts appear. They descend from the Pyrenees into Spain, in vast numbers, were blended—Celtiberians they are now called.

In recorded history, all the great divisions of the Caucasian race joined their blood with Spain's original people.

The Phoenicians, Carthaginians, Romans, Arabs and Moors invaded the country, each ruling in turn. Barbarian hordes from Asia and Germanic tribes from central Europe—the Alans and Suevi, the Visigoths and Vandals—swept over Spain, conquered it, ruled over it and were absorbed.

And out of this early human melting pot the Spanish people arose—a composite of Mediterranean and Teuton, Semite and Hamite.

The racial characteristics and stature of the Mediterranean today predominate. And their emotional traits—their passion for pomp and grandeur, their stately pride.

What is more, there is a remarkable mixture of oriental and occidental feeling in their magnificent architecture and paintings, a gorgeous richness in their colorful music that stirs the passions of the human heart deeper perhaps than music of other lands.

From primitive humanity they inherited hate and revenge, a fiery temper and bloodlust—bull fights—a survival of the gladiatorial days of ancient Rome.

Every invader was prompted by one desire—to get possession of Spain's great natural resources and her fertile Mediterranean fields.

Rome stocked her granary with Spain's agricultural products; Spain's mines filled her coffers with a seemingly inexhaustible supply of silver and gold.

At the time of the discovery of America, Spain was the richest metal-producing country on earth; it is still the richest metal-producing country in Europe.

Spain's mines yield gold, silver, silver-lead, lead, zinc, copper, coal, iron, quicksilver, sulphur, soda, graphite, alum and saltpetre.

Her quicksilver mines are the richest on earth; she produces more lead than any other country in Europe; her iron-ore produces the best steel, and her coal areas are estimated at 13-billion tons.

Spain's nearness to Africa has created the impression of a land of eternal spring, but her interior table land is highly elevated, causing climatic conditions of great extremes. Madrid, for instance, skates in winter and has a temperature of 107 in the shade of summer.

As rain falls only during the winter months, irrigation is necessary. A wide belt of "gardens" along the Mediterranean coast has been transformed by artificial watering into a region of remarkable fertility, and no land in the entire world is more productive in southern fruits, maize, sugar-cane, rice and every known vegetable. There are even abundant major grain crops in many other sections.

Oranges, lemons, olives are highly profitable; no other country produces so much olive oil as Spain. But her most important yields are her vineyards. Some of her wines have become indispensible, medicinally as well as for table use, such as Malaga, Alicante and Sherry. The wine industry produces often more than a third of Spain's total yearly exports.

And all of those who actually bestowed the labor on this most bountiful nature supply, have never been permitted to enjoy its wealth.

At the beginning of Spain's recorded history, the strength of the old Roman Civil law had already been tested and firmly established by the patrician Roman senate—the law that placed property rights above human rights.

After the Carthaginians were driven out of Spain, B. C. 206, Rome's power was resisted by the Cantabri and Astures—Celtiberians—for 187 years. Not until they laid down their arms to Augustus, B. C. 19, was Spain actually conquered—and Rome's Civil law became the law of the land.

Basically these statutes were never changed, the resulting evils flourished to a far greater extent in Spain than in any other country on earth—and by reason of its greater natural wealth.

Among these evils was the power of the Grandee. Absolutely exempted from taxation, they held the land, could not be imprisoned or otherwise punished for their misdoings, and they gradually monopolized all high state offices. Their power was checked in the 15th century, entirely abolished by Bonaparte in 1808, then again partly re-established in 1814.

Evil results even followed the ruthless conquest of Mexico and Peru when precious metals and stones of colossal value were poured into Spain—made Charles I. 1500-58, the most powerful ruler of Europe. He suppressed Protestantism, called the Diet of Worms, 1521, before which Martin Luther made his memorable defense.

While the Inquisition had started in Spain earlier, 1481, it was Charles' son, Philip II, under whose rule some of the greatest horrors in history were committed. The church in Rome tried to suppress these horrors, but the evil continued—never really ceased until the year 1834 brought their final end.

The law of the few, by the few and for the few has been the law of Spain.

Suppressed spiritually and materially, the Spanish people have never known freedom—individually or collectively.

Open revolts, uprisings, insurrections—time after time!

Like strings of red they run through page after page of Spanish history—the blood-marks of oppression.

And now, civil war is again raging—the age-old struggle of rising masses against classes; conflict to throw off the shackles of an economic system that has given all natural and labor-created wealth to the few, to the bitter want and misery of the many.

This system was broken with the recent ascent of a socialistic form of government that is now being challenged by the modern Grandees—power-greedy.

And, again, as of old, exploitation from without has joined exploitation from within.

Behind it all stands England's fear of losing Gibraltar. Indirectly, it gives the clue for the long continuance of the struggle.

Then, Europe's dictators have few natural resources and Spain has many—things that they have not, even to an oversupply.

There is understanding whereby the "insurgent" Grandees grant concessions in return for military assistance.

And so history repeats itself.

Human blood is being sacrificed, not for lack of natural resources, as is usually the case with countries of little natural wealth, but because of it.

The history of Spain is the history of human want and human greed—and all amid plenty.

A Farmer's Diary

March 25.

MY WIFE thinks I should get the lawn mower sharpened. It's too soon for that. The grass has only begun to grow, and the mower is in fair shape, anyway. What does a woman know about machinery?

Funny how women are. There's my neighbor, M——, now past sixty, who was a bachelor until late in life. His wife is a round, jolly, hard-working, neighborly soul, with a flock of grandchildren by a former marriage. She and M—— are very happy together. She takes excellent care of his house, his meals, and him—and half the time he doesn't even know he is being managed.

The cough syrup and the syrup of figs are in similar bottles. The old man's eyes are none too good, but it is his habit to take something for his cough, from the bottle on the mantel. Occasionally his wife juggles the bottles, according to her own diagnosis of his needs. And if a huge swig of syrup of figs does not stop his cough, at least Mrs. M—— declares "He might not take it if he knew, but it don't hurt him none."

She knows he is very fond of young dandelion greens. I saw her, just recovering from an illness, start across the fields with a basket on her arm; stoop with difficulty to dig the tender plants, return slowly with a quart of juicy, green and white clumps of stems.

"How will you prepare them?" I asked her.

"He likes them wilted, with bacon, and a mite o' vinegar. He'll scold me for goin' after them, but he'll eat them just the same—and they'll do him good. Nothin' better for a person in the spring than dandelion bitters."

They will do him good! She has his best interests at heart. Good wives are like that. . . .

Come to think of it, sharpening that lawn mower would give a man employment for an hour. Maybe I had better put it in my car before I forget it.

WATER BONDS SNAG COUNCIL

Issue Comes Up Again Tonight As Result of Technicality Over Required Vote.

Crum, who was out of the city on business.

Both Crum and Hunter are expected to attend tonight's session while Miller indicated last night that he would be unable to be present.

Before the seven councilmen cast their votes on the issue, they heard from Judge C. H. Huston, president of the Chamber of Commerce, and C. L. Van Derau, chairman of the chamber's water development committee.

Speaking for nearly an hour, Judge Huston and Van Derau called on council to approve the Woodland project and cited various reasons why the water improvements should be made at this time.

The Woodland program was endorsed by the chamber last year and several months ago the organization called on council again to approve this issue.

At the pre-meeting caucus session last night only one councilman expressed opposition to the measure. Miller said he declared himself a year ago as being against "plastering the waterworks with a mortgage and was not in favor of issuing any amount of bonds over $25,000."

Ward explained this morning that while the three-fourths majority was required on the motion for suspension of the rules, only a two-thirds vote was necessary on the approval for passage.

Recommends Resubmission.

He declared that the measure had been approved by council, but recommended that the legislation be submitted again tonight.

The reason for this, he explained was that on the question of a bond issue, the city was required to present a transcript of the legisaltion to the bonding company showing the procedure followed. To make sure that the bonding companies might not question the procedure, Ward said he had recommended that the measure be acted on again.

C. N. Shultz, chairman of council's water committee, who submitted the proposal at last night's session said that a new ordinance was being drafted today for presentation tonight.

The measure he said would be identical to the proposal submitted last night, with one exception—instead of asking for the issuance of $65,000 in mortgage revenue bonds, it will ask for $64,000. This is another technicality, as the bill resubmitted cannot be identical to the one turned down.

Following a pre-meeting caucus session in which Shultz had outlined three different plans for extensions in the water system—a $75,000 Woodland project, a $55,000 Woodland project and an $11,000 water main extension—he asked council to "go along" on the largest of the three projects.

As a work relief program, Shultz said the project would give 150 men work for at least three months.

"Do we want to place these men, who will be out of work here July 1 on the dole, or do we want to give them work," Shultz said. "We as members of council should clear our minds and conscience by at least giving these men three months work."

He pointed out that a year ago he had not been in favor of issuing water revenue bonds but stated that in view of the existing conditions, it was necessary.

Sees No Rate Increase.

"We can issue $65,000 in water revenue bonds and we will not have to raise the water rates," Schultz asserted.

The measure to go before council tonight calls for the issuance of $64,000 in mortgage revenue bonds against city's $1,500,000 water system along with a supplemental appropriation of $10,000 from the waterworks fund. All labor will be furnished by WPA.

The plan which is a part of the city improvements already approved by WPA and designed to bolster the water pressure in Woodland, calls for the construction of a tank tower and booster pumps at the reservoir, under contract at approximately $20,000, and a high capacity main from the reservoir over Cook road to Lexington avenue and down Lexington avenue to Blanche street.

Van Derau contended the $75,000 Woodland project would serve a two-fold purpose.

He pointed out that no action had been taken on the project in the past three months and asserted "it is high time for council to get in and do something about the water problem for the taxpayers in that area."

"Not only would the project serve to give better water pressure in Woodland," Van Derau said, 'but it would also provide work at a time when men need employment.

"It is not just a case of doing something for Woodland. Most of the people in that area have been forced to install pumps to get pressure in their homes, but the job would provide for WPA labor and give men employment in the building trade that has been retarded in that area because of the lack of water pressure."

Judge Joins In Plea.

Judge Huston who followed him explained the chamber was not attempting to dictate to council, but that the organization had done its duty by helping to sell the water needs to the city of Mansfield and that the question of financing now rested solely with council.

"However, you are not only faced with the water problem, but also that of providing relief," the judge said.

"With the change in conditions, it behooves us to meet that change. We must provide work to preserve the self-respect of those persons who are unemployed."

The body was removed to the Finefrock funeral home where services will be held at 3:30 p. m. Monday with Rev. H. S. Garnes of St. Lukes Lutheran church officiating. Burial will be in the Windsor cemetery.

Poor Little Eva!

Best golfer at Wooster, O., college, but not on the varsity team. That's the unhappy plight of Eva Shorb, of Massillon, O., who shoots around 80 consistently. It seems that Coach L. C. Boles won't break staid old college rules to place her on the team. Also Ohio conference rules say nothing of the fair sex in athletic competition. But Miss Shorb will be entered against other co-eds if matches can be arranged.

A Convict-Trained Roach

County Jailer Dick Vaughn, of Amarillo, Tex., was puzzled when prisoners in solitary confinement succeeded in having cigarets smuggled into their cells. One prisoner broke, and told Vaughn how it was done.

The cigaret was tied to the back of a cockroach. One of the beasties is pictured above, in the act. Talk about your trained fleas!

10 GROUPS CALL ON COUNCIL TO OKAY PARK JOB

Committee Studies Plea For Funds For WPA Project That Would Employ 80.

Council's finance committee had before it today a request calling for the release of sufficient funds to proceed with a proposed WPA city parks project that would give 80 WPA workers employment for four months.

The request, in the form of resolutions from 10 civic organizations, was presented to council last night, asking that council approve an appropriation of $6,000 as the city's share on a $25,000 parks improvement project.

A delegation of women representing Mansfield's five garden clubs was present at the meeting and called on council to consider the project that would beautify the city's parks and save them from further deterioration.

Asks Immediate Action.

Mrs. A. J. Reynolds, president of the Mansfield Garden club, told council that immediate action should be taken on the project in order to conserve the parks.

She said the garden clubs wanted to see the Mansfield parks brought back to places of beauty and made recreational centers.

"This is one of our problems," she said, "and we will be glad to meet with any council committee at any time to duscuss the matters."

The resolutions presented by several labor bodies and garden clubs stressed the need of the project to provide work for those on WPA rolls.

The park project which was discussed at the Town Hall meeting last month includes the cleaning up and beautifying all the unsightly spots in the city parks, building of stone walks and ramps, tearing down unsightly buildings and installing equipment to make the parks practical for outdoor recreation centers.

Plans call for approximately $19,000 in federal funds and $6,000 as the city's share.

The project has been approved by the district WPA office and is awaiting an appropriation from city council before it will go to Washington for final approval.

FATHER OF 7 SENT TO PEN

Shiloh Man One of 5 Pleading Guilty to Indictments; 3 Get Prison Terms.

Five of 10 persons arraigned on indictments in common pleas court this morning pleaded guilty before Judge C. H. Huston, two of them drawing reformatory sentences, one a penitentiary term and the other two probations.

Five prisoners, including one woman, pleaded not guilty and their trials were tentatively set for the last of next week. Four other persons indicted by the grand jury were not arraigned. Two, sought on secret indictments, have not been returned to the county while the others are in the Toledo state hospital and the Mansfield reformatory.

Jesse Snyder, 42, Shiloh, was sentenced to one to seven years in the Ohio penitentiary when he pleaded guilty to a grand larceny indictment returned Thursday by the grand jury. Snyder, father of seven children, admitted the theft of a set of harness from a farm near Shiloh. He had previously served a penitentiary term for larceny.

Paul Rhodes, 18, of Shelby, and Alvin Guthrie, 21, Bloominggrove township, drew one to 15 year terms in the Mansfield reformatory on their pleas of guilty to breaking and entering charges. They confessed stealing chickens at several farms in the county, including a number of fowls owned by Guthrie's parents.

Vaughn Watkins, 18, Mansfield, and Harold Hoover of Shelby, won probations as first offenders. Watkins admitted taking a "joy ride" in a car from a local parking lot, and Hoover pleaded guilty to a charge of abandoning his 18-year-old wife. Watkins, indicted for operating a motor vehicle without the owner's consent, was put on probation for two years and Hoover for three years. Both were ordered to pay costs and report to Harry Crouse, county probation officer.

Pleas of innocence were entered by John Campbell and Harvey Day, both colored, who were indicted for cutting with intent to wound; LeRoy Bemiller and his wife, Anna, accused of breaking into a home near Newville, and Arthur Jordan, colored, charged with operating a car without the owner's consent.

SATURDAY, MARCH 26, 1938.

Drive carefully tomorrow—this grand spring weather is just beginning.

The yellow race is now bleeding itself white.

Plowing.

SPRING plowing is a sort of rite with us," says a philosophic farmer in the field, as he gives his horses a breathing spell. "It's a new start. It's new hope. It's plowing under the mistakes of last year. It may be a feast—it may be a famine—but it's a new start. Plowing in the spring is more than hitching up a team of horses and getting out the plow.

"But there's a lot to think about these days as you follow the furrow. Sometimes it's better not to think. What's ahead of us we don't know. I sometimes wonder what's ahead for my children. Times change and customs change.

"I sort of hoped my boy would get interested in farming. At least he could keep a roof over his head and get enough to eat. But it seems he wants to be an aviator."

It might be worse. He might want to be a soldier. It's fine to be willing to be a soldier—but wanting to be is different.

Mexico Celebrates.

THE SOCIALIST trend in Mexico under the Cardenas administration reached a climax on March 23 in Mexico City. There was a mass demonstration and parade, said to be the greatest in Mexican history, celebrating the government's seizure of American-owned oil properties worth $400,000,000.

The demonstration was reported as including "representatives of all industries and commercial establishments," and expressed patriotic opposition to all foreigners, particularly Americans.

This sort of thing is peculiarly unfair and unwise. There was a time when our government, our industrialists and our capitalists treated Mexico and Mexicans in a high-handed way. Some of our exploiters of petroleum and gold were inexcusably domineering and high-handed. But in recent years neither our government nor our industrial captains have followed the old pattern. Washington has gone out of its way to conciliate Latin-American countries, and nowhere has the "good neighbor policy" been practiced with such generosity and patience as in Mexico.

It was somewhat reassuring to have the promise of President Cardenas, on March 22, that the seizure of oil properties would go no farther, and no similar measures were contemplated against other industries. But the celebration referred to raised the question whether the president can control the latent hostility to "gringos" that he has stirred up.

The property of course should be paid for, as Cardenas has promised, and hostile demonstrations should be officially discouraged.

Pension Revival.

HOUSE committees have favorably reported six pension bills—four of them dealing with World war service—the total cost of which would be more than $75,000,000. It seems to be a good year for pushing such bills, because the public as a whole is thinking chiefly about taxation, foreign policy and New Deal legislation. People pay little attention to the other grist poured into the congressional hopper. It is also a national election year, with all of the lower house and a third of the senate coming up for re-election and therefore seeking more than ever to please the best-organized constituents.

Each of the six bills is presented as an amendment to existing pension laws, proposing to liberalize benefits and increase the number of pensioners.

The trend of such legislation is a return to the pension systems which have long been recognized as bad and which the government sought to avoid by the war insurance and adjusted compensation measures. If that idea was wrong, then we might as well go ahead and pile pension on pension until every World war veteran and all their dependents receive something from the government. But if the idea of ending pension evils gradually was right, we should make more effort to stop the new proposals before they go too far.

Civilization's Failure.

OUR HUMAN RACE, which began in barbarism, may end in barbarism, and sooner than we have imagined. Certainly the wars now in progress and in prepartion suggest it. And this last barbarism is worse than the first, because it is more fatally effective, and because it is directed by leaders who, with ages of progressive culture behind them, and a knowledge of history, should know better.

Thus the summit of our industrial civilization, which should be bringing ease, happiness and enlightenment to all mankind, begins to destroy itself, starting a downward spiral of poverty, disease and death.

Man loses the brilliant promise of his progress in natural science, for lack of moral control. Perhaps the only thing that could save the human race from its present suicidal course would be a wave of moral and spiritual enlightenment.

Retired Liners.

TWO famous ships may disappear from the transatlantic service soon. The Berengaria, now 26 years old, has been laid up some time for repairs which probably will never be made. Reconditioning the vessel for use would cost $2,000,000, and there is not enough business in sight to justify that expense.

The new liner Queen Elizabeth, sister ship of the Queen Mary, is almost ready for regular operation. When it is, the Aquitania may follow the Berengaria into oblivion. Pre-war liners cannot compete with the huge modern vessels recently built or now building.

There is some question, however, whether the new luxury ships can pay their own way. They are not only costly to build but costly to operate, and a large part of the traveling public would rather pay lower fares and travel on smaller and less ornate vessels.

The consensus of military opinion seems to be that we should keep our feet on the ground and fight in the air.

Keeping Step

—By LESLIE EICHEL

"I see," says a friend who drops in on me every once in a while, "that Joe Kennedy, our new ambassador to Great Britain, and Herbert Hoover have been calling on King George in London.

"I guess Hoover can't do any harm now—but did you notice, he no sooner called on the French premier, than the premier fell, and no sooner did he visit the Austrian president than he became an 'ex' and the whole nation was wiped out in a landslide of Nazis. That's regular Hoover luck.

"But Joe Kennedy — he's an Irishman — isn't he? And it's enough to have all the Irish patriots turn over in their graves to see an Irishman put on evening clothes and bow before a king.

"But it's a changing world. They do be saying that the kings are the democrats these days, and the dictators the tyrants.

"King George, proud father, was said to have passed the whole time speaking of his two beautiful little darlings.

"Joe, he waits his turn, then he says, "Now let me show you pictures of my nine hopefuls."

"Maybe Joe sings 'God Save the King' and maybe he doesn't. But it doesn't do any Irishman or any American any good to be hobnobbing in high British society. It's not British liquor that puts us under the table, but British flattery."

• • •

SURE, BUT—!

"What I was thinking this evening when I came over to see you—after reading the usual war headlines—was this:

"We're being told an awful lot these days that we are a part of the whole world, and that democracy is at stake, and religion is being destroyed.

"And if Britain is destroyed, we're next. Sure, sure! But Britain won't be destroyed, because it still has most of the chips in the poker game and always gets out of the game before losing all. Britain just is being tantalized now—tantalized for a showdown with those chips, at a terrible cost in innocent lives. It's a big game—and the stakes are high.

"And, as for us, we're not good poker players. We're innocents abroad."

• • •

DRIVING AT WHAT—?

"What am I driving at? You think I'm foolish, huh?

"Oh, I know it's a changing world, and we have to keep up. We've got to find a way of solving our unemployment and economic problems. And we've got to be morally on the side of innocent peoples, crushed and ruined by these dictatorship juggernauts.

"But how? By listening to tales from English—or by settling our own affairs so that humanity can have a chance here? By joining with one group of nations against another? Wouldn't it be better to try to understand them, and be friendly and trade with them—and pay no attention to family quarrels? If we enter their back yard, as sure as the sun rises over Ireland, they will be blaming us, the rich uncle from America, for bringing on all their troubles by not sharing our supposed riches with them.

"I'm glad to see an Irishman in London. Maybe he'll remember that promises to minority peoples are fulfilled only in America, where they become one people, and all are the majority.

"But when he says that if there is another war, we may not be able to stay neutral, then I begin to think he'd better stop calling on the king. Yesterday England was mad at Italy, today she's signing a pact with Italy, and the Italians are still in Spain. Nobody's saved, except a British trade route. Today, England's in a fury with Germany; tomorrow, she'll sign a pact with Germany to maintain the balance of power against Russia, or somebody else. It's awfully puzzling. Maybe Joe can't keep up. But if we can't stay neutral, what country are we to fight—and why?

"And shall we have enough money left this time so that Hoover can feed the starving?

"Maybe we ought to try to do something to see that our own hungry get three square meals a day."

The Farmer and Laborer In the West.

SAN FRANCISCO—Hope of banding the farmer and the wage-earning laborer together for political unity in this part of the country must yield to the fact that the farmer and the hired man have undergone a change.

The Si Perkins model of farmer and Ole, the hired man, might have had some mutual interest at one time, but Si Perkins long ago became a "soulless corporation," with a board of directors in a big city, possibly Chicago or New York, and Ole is joining the Hayshakers' Union to fight for overtime and his Sundays off.

Pegler

They are no more congenial than Mr. Tom Girdler and the Steel Workers' Organizing committee, and the idea of their joining hands for mutual advantage is grimly humorous.

The farm is known nowadays as a farm-factory. It is organized, economized and mechanized and owned by or allied to big business and great corporation canneries adjoin the groves and fields, which are operated in units of from 1,000 to 10,000 acres.

• • •

IMPOSSIBLE TO SHRUG OFF PLIGHT.

The condition of the migratory sod-buster and picker who tincans it from crop to crop, following the seasons, has not been adequately dramatized, although John Steinbeck gave a glimpse in his story, "Of Mice and Men," and may yet spit on his hands and become the Charles Dickens of the California country slums.

These people are mostly Americans of old physically and economically impoverished stock, and it is no longer possible to shrug off the plight of the picker on the ground that he and his family are Mexicans or Orientals and therefore ineligible for honest American sympathy.

The Associated Farmers of California, an organization of big and little owners and operators, has threatened to boycott San Francisco and shop elsewhere for the members' machinery and all such tackle as farmers buy in cities, if the business men and labor leaders cannot put an end to the incessant lockouts and brawls which have made San Francisco an unreliable shopping point.

The Associated Farmers threaten not only to buy elsewhere but to ship through some other port, presumably Los Angeles, and while they were on the subject of obstreperous unions in the city they made the point that they could not permit the establishment of the closed shop or the union hiring hall in their own business. They include many small-patch operators who think their interests are identical with those of the big corporations.

• • •

HAS REMEDY FOR MARTYRISM.

This organization has been accused of fascism and has denied the aspersion, but one of the embattled big-time farmers recently revealed a plan which bespeaks the ribald mirth of the castor oil committees of Mussolini's early days.

He said that in any future fracases with the unioneers in the peaceful countryside he intended to shell them in the pants with his shotgun because Communists like to have news pictures taken for propaganda purposes showing small punctures in the chest, whereas not even a Communist can take scars of the class conflict worn on his stern.

Complicating all this, Dave Beck, the tough guy of the Teamsters' union, has been issuing regulations as to who may and may not drive a truck over the public roads of California, with a special hard glare in his eye for the small farmer who likes to combine a trip to market with a job of non-union commercial hauling on the return journey.

Thus the smallies, too, are finding reasons to resent and resist labor organizations, and the proposition, "Resolved, that the pitchfork is mightier than the wagon spoke," may yet be argued at intimate quarters on the poppy fields of the Golden State.

Health Advice

Infection Menace In Diabetes

—By DR. ROYAL COPELAND

IT IS only within recent years that the important relationship between infections and diabetes has been properly understood. At one time many of the serious and even fatal complications of diabetes occurred wholly because of the lack of attention to what seemed to be minor infections.

It is not long ago that it was quite common for diabetics to suffer from severe infections in the feet, demanding perhaps that the toes be amputated. This was not at all an unusual complication. Though diabetic gangrene, as it is called, is still encountered, it is not nearly as frequent as in former years.

The diabetic is extremely susceptible to infections. What would be a minor and trivial infection in one without diabetes may, if neglected, lead to a serious complication of the disease. For this reason diabetics should be instructed in the need for care of the feet and fingers. When reasonable precautions are taken, there is little danger of infection and this complication can be avoided.

According to a recent report from Bellevue hospital in New York City, certain instructions are given to all diabetic patients. These patients are warned about the care of the feet and advised as to their hygienic care. Let me tell you some of the rules that are given.

It is recommended that the diabetic soak his feet in a basin of warm, soapy water for five minutes every day. The parts should then be thoroughly dried with a turkish towel. Care should be taken to dry the skin in between the toes.

The feet should then be massaged with a little alcohol. This may be followed by massage with lanolin. Special attention should be given the soles and heels of the feet where callouses usually form.

If a diabetic suffers from ringworm or from ingrown toenail, or other disturbances of the feet, it is well that the doctor be consulted. There is no doubt that if the patient takes care of his feet and reports to the doctor at the slightest signs of infection, many of the dangerous infections will be avoided.

Of course, this care is only part of the treatment for diabetes. In addition, the disease must be treated by diet and the administration of insulin. The diet and amount of insulin must be determined by the attending physician.

Timely Editorial

She Wants Money.

What is the most frequent cause of family quarrels? Money! Wives want a larger share, or they want the say as to how family income shall be spent.

The Ladies' Home Journal reports the result of another survey to learn the opinions of women about intimate home questions. About 88 per cent of the thousands of women interviewed objected to having to ask their husbands for personal spending money.

And they had good reason. They said a woman must be well-dressed or she won't get married. After she is married she needs good clothes to keep her husband's devotion. So she ought to have her own apportionment of the partnership income to be sure to make the partnership satisfactory.

Only 48 per cent of the wives said they got housekeeping allowances, though the survey seems to prove that women by one method or another control 80 per cent of the money spent by American homes.

And here is a significant fact bearing on future policies: 94 per cent of unmarried girls questioned "issued a ultimatum" that they would demand allowances when married.—Detroit News.

What One Man Thinks

—By DAVID GIBSON

Spain.

SINCE the early dawn of the Great Ice Age, probably much longer, man has roamed through Spain.

There are his implements in flint, his many objects in bone.

Caspians came to explore—left drawings of human figures—African Negroes—in many caves.

The Magdaleneans carved now long extinct animals in ivory and horn, painted the wild horse, the bison, the woolly rhinoceros, the mammoth, frequently in brilliant colors—even in almost inaccessible cave-chambers only reached by swimming subterranean streams.

Thus, sometimes amidst magnificent stalactites, as in a dream-cathedral, they are found today, remarkable examples of prehistoric art in their startling likeness, their amazing realism and exuberant vitality—silent attestants of the observing and creative intelligence of Paleolithic man—an intelligence defying our own.

Then, many thousands of years later, a distinct race emerges out of the dim past—the Iberians—the earliest in Spain. And the Celts appear. They descend from the Pyrenees into Spain, in vast numbers, were blended—Celtiberians they are now called.

In recorded history, all the great divisions of the Caucasian race joined their blood with Spain's original people.

The Phoenicians, Carthaginians, Romans, Arabs and Moors invaded the country, each ruling in turn. Barbarian hordes from Asia and Germanic tribes from central Europe—the Alans and Suevi, the Visigoths and Vandals—swept over Spain, conquered it, ruled over it and were absorbed.

And out of this early human melting pot the Spanish people arose—a composite of Mediterranean and Teuton, Semite and Hamite.

The racial characteristics and stature of the Mediterranean today predominate. And their emotional traits—their passion for pomp and grandeur, their stately pride.

What is more, there is a remarkable mixture of oriental and occidental feeling in their magnificent architecture and paintings, a gorgeous richness in their colorful music that stirs the passions of the human heart deeper perhaps than music of other lands.

From primitive humanity they inherited hate and revenge, a fiery temper and bloodlust—bull fights—a survival of the gladiatorial days of ancient Rome.

Every invader was prompted by one desire—to get possession of Spain's great natural resources and her fertile Mediterranean fields.

Rome stocked her granary with Spain's agricultural products; Spain's mines filled her coffers with a seemingly inexhaustible supply of silver and gold.

At the time of the discovery of America, Spain was the richest metal-producing country on earth; it is still the richest metal-producing country in Europe.

Spain's mines yield gold, silver, silver-lead, lead, zinc, copper, coal, iron, quicksilver, sulphur, soda, graphite, alum and saltpetre.

Her quicksilver mines are the richest on earth; she produces more lead than any other country in Europe; her iron-ore produces the best steel, and her coal areas are estimated at 13-billion tons.

Spain's nearness to Africa has created the impression of a land of eternal spring, but her interior table land is highly elevated, causing climatic conditions of great extremes. Madrid, for instance, skates in winter and has a temperature of 107 in the shade of summer.

As rain falls only during the winter months, irrigation is necessary. A wide belt of "gardens" along the Mediterranean coast has been transformed by artificial watering into a region of remarkable fertility, and no land in the entire world is more productive in southern fruits, maize, sugar-cane, rice and every known vegetable. There are even abundant major grain crops in many other sections.

Oranges, lemons, olives are highly profitable; no other country produces so much olive oil as Spain. But her most important yields are her vineyards. Some of her wines have become indispensible, medicinally as well as for table use, such as Malaga, Alicante and Sherry. The wine industry produces often more than a third of Spain's total yearly exports.

And all of those who actually bestowed the labor on this most bountiful nature supply, have never been permitted to enjoy its wealth.

At the beginning of Spain's recorded history, the strength of the old Roman Civil law had already been tested and firmly established by the patrician Roman senate—the law that placed property rights above human rights.

After the Carthaginians were driven out of Spain, B. C. 206, Rome's power was resisted by the Cantabri and Astures—Celtiberians—for 187 years. Not until they laid down their arms to Augustus, B. C. 19, was Spain actually conquered—and Rome's Civil law became the law of the land.

Basically these statutes were never changed, the resulting evils flourished to a far greater extent in Spain than in any other country on earth—and by reason of its greater natural wealth.

Among these evils was the power of the Grandee. Absolutely exempted from taxation, they held the land, could not be imprisoned or otherwise punished for their misdoings, and they gradually monopolized all high state offices. Their power was checked in the 15th century, entirely abolished by Bonaparte in 1808, then again partly re-established in 1814.

Evil results even followed the ruthless conquest of Mexico and Peru when precious metals and stones of colossal value were poured into Spain—made Charles I, 1500-58, the most powerful ruler of Europe. He suppressed Protestantism, called the Diet of Worms, 1521, before which Martin Luther made his memorable defense.

While the Inquisition had started in Spain earlier, 1481, it was Charles' son, Philip II, under whose rule some of the greatest horrors in history were committed. The church in Rome tried to suppress these horrors, but the evil continued—never really ceased until the year 1834 brought their final end.

The law of the few, by the few and for the few has been the law of Spain.

Suppressed spiritually and materially, the Spanish people have never known freedom—individually or collectively.

Open revolts, uprisings, insurrections—time after time!

Like strings of red they run through page after page of Spanish history—the blood-marks of oppression.

And now, civil war is again raging—the age-old struggle of rising masses against classes; conflict to throw off the shackles of an economic system that has given all natural and labor-created wealth to the few, to the bitter want and misery of the many.

This system was broken with the recent ascent of a socialistic form of government that is now being challenged by the modern Grandees—power-greedy.

And, again, as of old, exploitation from without has joined exploitation from within.

Behind it all stands England's fear of losing Gibraltar. Indirectly, it gives the clue for the long continuance of the struggle.

Then, Europe's dictators have few natural resources and Spain has many—things that they have not, even to an oversupply.

There is understanding whereby the "insurgent" Grandees grant concessions in return for military assistance.

And so history repeats itself.

Human blood is being sacrificed, not for lack of natural resources, as is usually the case with countries of little natural wealth, but because of it.

The history of Spain is the history of human want and human greed—and all amid plenty.
